Woman dies in flooded B'luru underpass

Infosys employee, 6 relatives were out on a city tour in taxi; 24mm rain pounds city

AKNISREE KARTHIK
@ Bengaluru

A 22-year-old woman, working with Infosys in Bengaluru, died after an SUV in which she was travelling along with six of her relatives got stuck in the flooded KR Circle underpass, less than a kilometre away from the state's seat of power – Vidhana Soudha -- in Bengaluru on Sunday.

The deceased, Battula Bhanurekha, and her relatives had hired a taxi and were out sightseeing when their taxi got stranded in the flooded underpass. Her relatives had come to the city on Friday and wanted to spend the weekend with her.

The underpass, which connects Dr Ambedkar Road with Nrupatunga Road, started flooding rapidly as the city received 24 mm rain within one hour on Sunday afternoon. The taxi driver, who was passing through the underpass around 3.45 pm, failed to gauge the depth of water and tried to speed through it. But the vehicle got stranded midway with six passengers, including Bhanurekha, stuck inside. As the water level started rising quickly, the stranded passengers were unable to come out of the vehicle, and they started screaming for help.

A reporter with a private Kannada TV channel, who heard their cries, immediately alerted the police and also sought help from people around. Some jumped in, helped the passengers come out of the car and made them stand on top of the vehicle. Some women also gave their sarees to the people involved in the rescue operation.

Among initial rescuers was Mahesha P, a head constable with the Karnataka State Industrial Security Force. He stopped his police jeep and dove into the water to help the stranded. He told The New Indian Express that the doors of the SUV were jammed and could not be opened. He and other citizen-rescuers helped all the six passengers and the driver out. But it took longer to pull out Bhanurekha as they had to break the windshield, he said.

NIA arrests JeM operative ahead of G20 meet in J&K

FAYAZ WANI @ Srinagar

IN a major breakthrough, a day before the G20 tourism meeting in Srinagar, the NIA on Sunday arrested a Jaish-e-Mohammad operative who was sharing sensitive information about the movement of troops with his Pakistani handlers.

According to an NIA spokesman, the agency's sleuths arrested Jaish operative Mohammad Ubaid Malik of Kupwara for his involvement in the terror-related conspiracy.

"He was in constant touch with a Pakistan based-JeM Commander. Investigations revealed that he was passing on secret information, especially regarding the movement of security forces to the Pak-based commander. Incriminating documents show his involvement in furtherance of terror activities in J&K has been recovered from him," he said.

The arrest came hours ahead of the start of G20 tourism working group meeting in Srinagar on Monday. The third G20 tourism working group meeting under India's presidency is being held in Srinagar between May 22 and 24 at Sheri-Kashmir International Conference Centre on the banks of Dal Lake in Srinagar.

About 200 guests, including foreign delegates and select Indian officials, would stay at Taj Vivanta and Lalit Grand Palace hotels on the banks of Dal Lake. The delegates are expected to visit the Mughal gardens, botanical garden, Royal Springs Golf Course and Polo View for sightseeing. They would also enjoy a Shikara ride.

However, planned visits by delegates to the world-famous ski resort of Gulmarg and Dachigam National Park have been cancelled on account of security concerns. Police had in April arrested an overground worker of Jaish Farooq Ahmad Wani, who was working in a five-star hotel in Srinagar as a driver. The officials, however, attributed the dropping of venues to the busy schedule of the delegates.

Heavy security arrangements have been put in place for the G20 event, including the deployment of anti-drone systems. It will be the first major international event in J&K after the dilution of Article 370.

The road from the airport to the G20 venue has been spruced up for the big event.

Don't stop traffic for me: Siddu tells cops

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @ Bengaluru

A day after swearing-in as chief minister, Siddaramaiah on Sunday announced that he will not opt for zero-traffic for the movement of his vehicles in Bengaluru.

He has asked Bengaluru City Police Commissioner Pratap Reddy not to stop traffic completely to allow his convoy to move. "I have taken the decision after seeing the problems faced by the people travelling along the stretch where there are restrictions due to zero traffic," he tweeted. It was widely appreciated by netizens.

The zero-traffic facility is given to VIPs, including the chief minister, where the traffic police stop all other vehicles from taking the route the VIP would be travelling in.

Siddaramaiah also tweeted, "I have decided not to accept flowers or shawls from people who often give it as a mark of respect. This is during both personal and public events. People can give books if they want to express their love and respect in the form of gifts. May all your love and affection continue to be on me."

After the heavens stopped, a heavenly Virat Kohli and Shubman Gill treated the crowd to an exhibition of white-ball batting. After Kohli, who was the one-man band as far as the Bangalore batting was concerned, scored a second consecutive 100, Gill, if anything, matched his India senior stroke for stroke. Chasing 198 on another batting track, Gujarat ran into choppy waters before Gill took over control in the back-end of the second innings to hit his first 100 of the season. P13

WILL DEFEAT ORDINANCE IN 2024 SEMI-FINAL: KEJRIWAL

PREETHA NAIR @ New Delhi

THE row over the Centre's ordinance to bypass a Supreme Court order that gave the Arvind Kejriwal-led AAP government in Delhi control over bureaucrats seems headed for a political show of strength. On Sunday, JD(U) leader and Bihar Chief Minister Nitish Kumar called on the AAP leader to extend support in his fight against the Centre on the issue.

"How can the Centre take away the state's rights, which were given by the SC? We will unite as many Opposition parties as possible and run a nationwide campaign against the ordinance," Nitish said.

RJD leader and Bihar deputy CM Tejashwi Yadav was also present at the meeting, held at Kejriwal's residence

The development comes a day after the big show of Opposition unity at the swearing-in ceremony of the new Congress government Karnataka.

Having secured Nitish's support, Kejriwal will now meet other Opposition leaders such as West Bengal CM Mamata Banerjee on May 23, Sena leader Uddhav Thackeray on May 24 and NCP supremo Sharad Pawar on May 25.

Pawar says K'taka results show situation changing

Mumbai: The Nationalist Conrgess Party leader Sharad Pawar on Sunday said the results of the Karnataka Assembly elections show the situation is gradually changing. The veteran leader said if the working class remains strong and united, what was seen in the Karnataka Assembly polls can be replicated elsewhere

Kejriwal said the ordinance can be defeated in the Rajya Sabha if all Opposition parties vote against it. "If it is defeated, it will be a semi-final of the 2024 elections. A message will be sent out to the country that BJP will not be able to return in 2024," he said.

The AAP government and the Centre are locked in a fight for control of Delhi's administrative services. The Centre had promulgated the ordinance on Friday to create a National Capital Civil Service Authority for the transfer and posting of bureaucrats in Delhi.

While several opposition parties have termed the ordinance an attack on the federal structure of the country, Nitish, who spearheads the Opposition unity project, said he will try to unite all parties against the Centre's move to curtail the power of states.

When asked if the Congress will join the campaign against the ordinance, Kumar said he will speak to the grand old party's leadership on the issue.

Mid-July launch date for ISRO's Chandrayaan-3 lunar mission

DONNA EVA @ Bengaluru

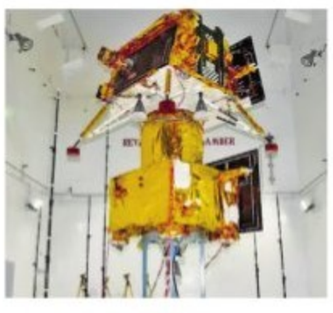
THE Indian Space Research Organisation (ISRO) has announced that it is aiming to launch its Chandrayaan-3 spacecraft in the middle of July, likely on July 12.

The Chandrayaan-3 is the third planned launch in the Chandrayaan space programme. It's a follow-up to the launch of the Chandrayaan-2 in 2019, which consisted of a lunar orbiter, a soft lander and a rover.

However, during the Chandrayaan-2 mission, the soft lander had failed, which was attributed to a software glitch. The Chandrayaan-3 will be another attempt at demonstrating the capabilities of the soft lander, rover and a propulsion module.

According to ISRO officials, the mission launch date is likely July 12, with the Chandrayaan-3 spacecraft attempting a soft landing near the lunar south pole on August 23. The spacecraft will also be competing with the Russian-made Luna 25, which has a launch date of July 13.

Currently, preparations are on for the launch of the Chandrayaan-3. It completed all necessary testing as of March this year. The Chandrayaan-3 spacecraft has been equipped to collect samples of the lunar surface as well as readings on seismic activity, the lunar environment and elemental compositions, near the landing site. Interestingly, while the Chandrayaan-2 was equipped with an orbiter, lander and rover, the third mission will have a lander, rover and propulsion module. According to ISRO officials, the propulsion module will also act as a communications relay satellite.



The mission is aimed at demonstrating ISRO's capabilities in landing a spacecraft on the Moon, specifically for a collaboration with Japan in the proposed Lunar Polar Exploration Mission. The two countries will work on collecting, sampling and analysing lunar materials. The Lunar Polar Exploration Mission, or Chandrayaan-4, is expected to be launched by 2025, where the proposed lunar lander and rover will try to explore the south pole of the Moon.

The Chandrayaan, or Indian Lunar Exploration, programme was conceived of in 2003 and was announced by the then Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee.

Chandrayaan-3 spacecraft has completed all necessary tests as of March this year. The spacecraft will be competing with Russia's Luna 25, which has a launch date of July 13

INS Vikrant makes first docking at Kadamba

SUBHASH CHANDRA N S @ Karwar

THE India's first Indigenous Aircraft Carrier -- INS Vikrant -- that arrived in Karwar was successfully berthed at the newly constructed Aircraft Carrier Pier at Kadamba Naval Base on Sunday.

The Navy's official Twitter handle hailed it as a landmark in enhancing ship-berthing capacity at the Karwar base.

The arrival of INS Vikrant here was speculated way back in 2020, even before the aircraft carrier began its sea trials. INS Vikrant was built at Cochin Shipyard Limited (CSL) at Kochi in Kerala, and has a displacement of 40,000 tonnes. It is 262 metre long with a 62 metre beam.

DOWNPOUR LEAVES CITIZENS IN DISTRESS

- Houses in Mahalakshmi Layout, other low-lying areas flooded
- BBMP gets 70 calls, majority about tree fall, traffic jams, power outages
- IMD forecasts rain in most parts of Karnataka over next five days

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
@Bengaluru

SUNDAY afternoon's downpour not only stranded people on the roads, but also held them hostage in their homes.

Residents of Mahalakshmi Layout in Marapannapalya complained that water gushed into 15-20 houses in the area. They said it was completely unexpected as roads in the area were recently tarred and BBMP officials had claimed to have desilted the drains.

"Every time it rains, we are worried what will happen to us. There is no safety at all," said a resident of the area.

Those living in other low-lying areas were similarly trapped. While water did not enter all homes, vehicles were stuck in the floodwaters. Commuters from most parts of the city complained that they had to struggle through water-logged roads to reach their destination.

BBMP officials reached Mahalakshmi Layout to clear water from flooded houses. However, citizens complained that they arrived after the rain reduced, and they had cleared it themselves. The BBMP used pumpsets to do the same.

The BBMP Control Room received more than 70 distress calls. Over 50 calls were about fallen trees and branches blocking roads and causing traffic jams, and in some cases, had come down on houses. Wall collapse incidents were also reported, including one in Malleswaram, near Govt Girls' School and PU College.

Most complaints were received from West Zone (46) and were largely about fallen trees blocking roads. A BMTC bus narrowly escaped a mishap when a tree fell on JC Road, near Vijayanagar.

There were 19 calls from East Zone complaining about water-logging. BBMP Special Commissioners took timely updates of the rainfall, and assembled teams to clear the roads.

A complaint was registered in Rajajinagar where a metal sheet flew into a tree, damaging its branches and posing a risk of falling. Officials rushed to the spot to clear the road.

BBMP coordinated with other departments through WhatsApp groups for quick action. Residents also complained of power cuts. Bescom officials said due to the weather situation and complaints of tree branches falling on poles and lines, power snapped in some places. Work to restore power supply started soon after rain receded.

Heavy rains that lashed Bengaluru airport since Sunday noon forced the diversion of five flights. Three IndiGo flights and one Air Asia flight were diverted to Chennai, while one Star Air flight was diverted to Hyderabad, said a spokesperson of airport operator, Bengaluru International Airport Limited (BIAL). According to an Indigo spokesperson, a flight from Chennai which took off at 2.12 pm was reverted midway due to poor weather in Bengaluru. Star Air flight from Kalaburagi scheduled to reach Terminal 2 was diverted to Hyderabad, said an airline source. Air Asia spokesperson said a flight from Chennai also had to be sent back.

3 hrs, 30mm: Rain, wind, thunder, hail rock city

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @Bengaluru:

IN just three hours on Sunday – from 2.30pm to 5.30pm -- Bengaluru recorded 30mm rainfall. It was accompanied by thunder, lightning, hail and strong winds.

Many parts of Bengaluru came under hailstones, especially in North and West Bengaluru, including Malleswaram, Rajajinagar, Shivajinagar, Mehkri Circle, Hebbal, Yeshwantpur, Banaswadi, Magadi Road and surrounding areas. The sudden downpour led to flooding in most parts of the city, and also power cuts.

"Winds were strong and gusty, and the sky was overcast. It felt like 6pm even at 3pm. Suddenly there was loud thunder, coupled with lightning, and then a sudden heavy downpour. We could see cars suddenly coming to a halt on the road," said Mayank Agarwal, a resident of Rajajinagar.

According to India Meteorological Department officials, while Bengaluru city recorded thundershowers on Sunday afternoon, other parts of south interior Karnataka experienced light to moderate rainfall, including the districts of Kolar, Tumakuru and Chikkaballapur.

As per IMD data, the city had recorded 30mm rainfall till 5.30pm, while HAL airport recorded 25.1mm and KIA recorded 8.6mm. Till 8.30pm, the city recorded 31.4mm and HAL airport recorded 26.5mm rainfall. An intense spell of rain was reported from 3.30-4pm, when most parts of the city recorded 24mm rainfall. "Such thundershowers in the city are normal, especially in the month of May, as part of pre-monsoon showers. The rainfall on Saturday and Sunday was because of local deep convection, where cumino nimbus clouds had formed deep in the atmosphere. There was also a sheer zone, coupled with moisture in the air and instability, there were hailstones and thundershowers. Last year too, similar incidents were reported in May. An alert was issued, warning of heavy rainfall, and officials of government departments, including DCs, are informed, but little attention is paid to the alerts," said the IMD official.

The IMD has forecast rain over most parts of Karnataka for the next five days -- heavy downpour for the first three days and gradual reduction on day four and five.

Avoid underpasses during rain: BBMP

BOSKY KHANNA @ Bengaluru

THIS is not the first time vehicles were stranded in underpasses and passengers struggled to reach safety. However, the death of a woman is a matter of grave concern and shame, admitted senior BBMP officials.

"Citizens must avoid underpasses whenever it rains," warned officials. "They are vulnerable spots. The drainage below underpasses is poorly structured, leading to water-logging. As a matter of fact, there is an unwritten rule that underpasses should be closed as soon as rain starts. To give more clarity, we will inform the traffic police department," they added.

"Usually, vehicles avoid underpasses when it rains, due to uncertainty of how deep the water could be. What was going on in the mind of the driver who was stranded at KR Circle, no one can say. For safety, underpasses should be avoided," the official stressed.

Bengaluru City Traffic police also advised citizens not to stand below flyovers and underpasses for shelter.

BBMP Administrator Rakesh Singh said he will call for a meeting with all department heads to take stock of the situation and find a solution. "Sunday's incident is a matter of shame and will be looked into in detail," he said.

Citizens now ask where they should seek shelter. "Not everyone in Bengaluru owns a car, and using a car is also not safe as it starts to float when it is inundated by water. There is no space for citizens, and bus stands are also not well-maintained," said Shilpa R, a commuter.

'Underpass was blocked, but driver drove through'

CITIZENS complained that the fire forces personnel came to the spot only around 4.15 pm, nearly half-an-hour after the incident. They rescued all those stuck in rainwater and rushed Bhanurekha and her family members to St Martha's Hospital.

Doctors at the hospital said that Rekha was frothing in her mouth and had no pulse when she was brought in. They declared her dead soon after. It is said that Bhanurekha was working in the marketing section of Infosys.

BBMP Chief Commissioner Tushar Girinath said the underpass was flooded as the city received more than 24 mm of rain within one hour which was much more than the carrying capacity of the underpass. He said the traffic police barricade the underpass during heavy rain, but the driver chose to drive through.

Relatives of the deceased woman in deep grief on Sunday

A pall of gloom descended at Telaprolu village of Krishna district, from where Bhanurekha hailed.

Her body will be reportedly brought to the village on Monday and last rites will be performed the same day.

Underpass not barricaded, auto gets stuck

While the SUV was being pulled out of the underpass, another autorickshaw with two passengers also got stuck in the water. Auto driver Rajanna said the underpass was not barricaded to stop vehicles from entering it. He said he could not see that the underpass was flooded. While the passengers managed to come out on their own, the auto had to be pulled with the help of ropes by the fire forces personnel. The police barricaded the stretch only after the tragedy.

CM announces ₹5 lakh ex-gratia to victim

Chief Minister Siddaramaiah visited the KR Circle underpass where a woman techie died on Sunday evening. He visited St Martha's Hospital, consoled the family member of Rekha and announced a compensation of Rs 5 lakh to her family. He said the government will bear the cost of treatment of her other family members.

Responding on the allegations that doctors refused to treat Bhanurekha, who was alive when she was taken to the hospital, Siddaramaiah said action will be taken after looking into the allegations.

PLAN NEEDED TO AVOID FLOODING IN CITY, SAYS DK SHIVAKUMAR

Deputy Chief Minister DK Shivakumar, who visited the KR Circle underpass on Sunday night, said the death was unfortunate. "The government has taken the flooding seriously and a detailed action plan is needed to avert floods in Bengaluru. Measures will be taken to prevent flooding of underpasses and such unfortunate incidents should never recur." He lauded all those citizens who were involved in the rescue operation that saved the lives of six people.

Daily Starscope

PETER VIDAL

22ND May : I'd like to remind you of one of my favourite quotes. It's from the German philosopher Immanuel Kant. He said, 'Two things fill the mind with ever new and increasing wonder and awe - the starry heavens above me and the moral law within me'. Wise words indeed, and spoken over two hundred years ago!

ARIES (Mar 21 - Apr. 20)
There's a certain pleasing symmetry in the fact that the Moon plays such a powerful role in your chart. You may visualise this as a perfect time to make a fresh start, particularly in an intense emotional relationship, but there's no reason why you should restrict yourself to personal matters.

TAURUS (Apr. 21 - May 21)
Probably the best thing you can do today is spend a little time in quiet reflection, mulling over the problem of how to make it up to a special person, or perhaps how to reconcile friends who have fallen out. You're interested in the truth - much to your credit.

GEMINI (May 22 - June 21)
There are few indications as to why partners may be irritated. One possibility is that long-term financial commitments are setting them on edge. Another is that they are annoyed by your attitude to money, or perhaps by their belief that you take them for granted.

CANCER (June 22 - July 23)
Personally, and emotionally you seem to be pulled in different directions at the moment. This may not be unusual, so hopefully you should by now know how to deal with such little downs amidst the occasional ups. It's all a matter of striking a sensible balance.

LEO (July 24 - Aug. 23)
The tide of fortune has not yet completely turned and, when it does, you will have to make some very fast decisions. If your work life appears to be bogged down in bureaucracy, be patient and take whatever time is necessary to work through it. And, if you wish, you may let partners set the pace at home.

VIRGO (Aug. 24 - Sept. 23)
You can think of the next few weeks as a time to take on even greater challenges, both personally and professionally. The immediate requirement, though, is to consult family members and take decisions about your home. Try to do your best for others as well as yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 24 - Oct. 23)
Venus, planet of love, holds you under its sway, enhancing a general feeling of well-being. However, lurking beneath the surface is a deep unconscious demand for personal freedom which will put a strain on at least one close relationship. Hopefully you'll deal with it with your usual grace.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24 - Nov. 22)
Don't be tempted to use finances as a lever because you never know when current actions could rebound on you. It could be next month before long-term plans bear fruit, so do yourself a favour and think ahead. Don't wait for fate to step in and determine the outcome.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23 - Dec. 22)
There's a sense of anticipation in the air. It seems likely that events which have been taking place almost unnoticed, perhaps behind the scenes, are shortly to come into the open. Whatever you do, don't force the pace, and don't make a partner feel as if they're trapped in a corner.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 23 - Jan. 20)
On no account should you do or say anything which might upset or alienate partners or business associates. The fact is that one particular planet - Mercury - indicates that you don't yet know your own mind. Another - Venus - suggests that you can persuade other people to back you in any case.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 - Feb. 19)
You really do have an awful lot going for you, although for some reason today seems like a good time to have a moan. Perhaps you're already experiencing the first emotional ripples from the next serious Saturnine alignment, or maybe you're just fed up with someone who has let you down!

PISCES (Feb. 20 - Mar 20)
When planets move through enthusiastic parts of your chart, they oblige you to be a little less passive than is your wont. So it is that today's lively Moon makes it clear that you should not, indeed must not, sit on the sidelines. But making up your mind could be harder than you think.

Study: Young with mental health issues face heart attack risk

Adopt a better lifestyle, exercise & change eating habits: Cardiologist Dr Manjunath

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
@ Bengaluru

ADULTS in their 20s and 30s with mental disorders have a higher chance of suffering a heart attack or stroke, states a new study published by the European Journal of Preventive Cardiology.

Individuals who are younger than 40 and have a mental disorder, such as anxiety, depression, posttraumatic stress disorder (PTSD), psychoses and other stress-related issues, are 58% more likely to suffer a heart attack and 42% more likely to have a stroke than those with no disorders.

The report highlighted that "cardiovascular disease prevention efforts are needed to prevent heart attacks and strokes in young patients with mental disorders".

Consultant Cardiologist Dr Manjunath, Apollo Hospitals, said, "As Asians we are at a bigger risk of suffering a heart attack, there is at least a 20-year difference between Europeans and Indians when it comes to the age of having these attacks".

He said that at present, he is treating a 23-year old woman who had suffered a heart attack. "Her reports showed no comorbidities and no genetic indications to have heart diseases." He said people who have mental disorders are more prone to heart issues as they are not able to express their pain like others.

Dr Virbhan Balai, Cardiologist, Max Super Speciality Hospital, said, "Young individuals with mental disorders are definitely at higher risk compared to someone with no mental health disease. However, the numbers will never be close to people in the older age group due to the large number of comorbidities."

Dr Manjunath said the way forward is to adapt to a better lifestyle, exercise regularly, change eating habits and quickly consult a doctor if any symptoms of chest pain are felt.

Experts said the heart attack numbers among the younger generation have gone up by at least 10 per cent post-Covid.

The study stated, "One in every eight of the 20-to-39-year-old participants had some kind of mental illness including depression, anxiety and insomnia."

A total of 6,557,727 individuals were examined between 2009 and 2012 and 13.1% participants had at least one mental disorder.

Grow out of tobacco, says control cell

NAMRATA SINDWANI
@ Bengaluru

THE Karnataka State Tobacco Control Cell (KSTCC) plans to collaborate with the Department of Horticulture, Agriculture and Rural Development and Panchayat Raj (RDPR) to reduce tobacco cultivation and provide farmers with crop diversification options.

Around 25-30 villages in Mandya and Ramanagara districts have been successfully made tobacco-free. Now with the assistance of other government departments, the Tobacco Control Cell plans to replicate the same in other tobacco-growing districts - Mysuru, Hassan, Belagavi, Shivamogga, Chikkamagaluru and Madikeri, said Prabhakara, project coordinator, KSTCC.

The tobacco growing areas will be reviewed to suggest possible alternate cropping solutions to farmers. Even the World Health Organisation (WHO) also recognises the need to promote economically sustainable alternatives to tobacco growing to prevent adverse social and economic impacts of tobacco on people whose livelihoods depend on tobacco production.

SJ Chander, Convenor from Consortium for Tobacco Free Karnataka, also said they are working in association with the department to cut down tobacco production in Karnataka.

The government should come up withe measures and extend expertise and resources to grow out of tobacco, he said, adding that the since it produces high revenue for both government and companies selling tobacco products, incentive is low to take any steps. But there are no benefits for farmers, he said.

Chander has suggested that beyond the flue cured Virginia (FCV) tobacco which is mainly exported, cultivation of other tobacco products must be reduced. WHO has highlighted the perils of cultivating tobacco on the health of farmers and soil. It leads to depletion of water resources, causes soil erosion, contamination of air and water. The amount of nicotine absorbed by farmers during the cultivation process is highly toxic.

KCET ends with 93% attendance, CUET starts

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE

A student runs towards the entrance of an examination centre of the Common Entrance Test in Bengaluru on Sunday | NAGARAJA GADEKAL

THE Karnataka Common Entrance Test (KCET) concluded on Sunday, while the Common University Entrance Test (CUET) also commenced across the country.

With an attendance of 93.16 per cent on the second day, 2.43 lakh KCET candidates attempted the Physics and Mathematics paper of the 2.61 lakh candidates registered in total. The tests took place at 592 centres across the state. Karnataka Examination Authority (KEA), Executive Director Ramya S stated that Kannada language test will be conducted on May 22, Monday, for Horanadu and Gadinadu Kannadiga candidates at centres in Belagavi, Ballari, Vijayapura, Mangaluru, Bidar and Bengaluru.

Meanwhile, CUET also began on Sunday, with 1.75 lakh students writing the examination on the first day across 271 cities and 447 centres. It will go on till June 6, across 26 centres in Karnataka.

Several students complained that they had to choose between CUET and KCET as the two examinations clashed on Sunday and alleged that thousands were affected by the overlap. However, KEA Executive Director Ramya said to TNIE that KCET would not be postponed as the probability of students appearing for both the examinations at the same time was very low. CUET takes place in three slots during the next 14 days. Candidates were given the option to choose their slots from 8.30am to 10.30am, 12pm to 2pm or 3.30pm to 6.30pm. However, the first shift of the KCET examinations took place from 10.30am to 11.50am.

Ramya also stated that the KCET timetable had been published prior to the CUET dates and appeals to change the dates came just a few days prior to the commencement of the two examinations, making it impossible to postpone on short notice. CUET was initially scheduled to take place between May 21 and May 31, but had to extend by four days to accommodate more students writing it.

Dry waste centre gutted in JP Nagar

PURAN CHOUDHARY @ Bengaluru

A dry waste collection (DWCC) was gutted on Saturday evening in JP Nagar. No casualty was reported, and the police have launched an investigation.

The centre, run by a former waste picker, Kumuda, had 16 women working as segregators. According to residents of Ward 177, the centre caught fire around 7:15 pm on Saturday and by 7:45 more than 80 per cent of it was engulfed by the blaze.

Fire department personnel doused the fire but the materials were reduced to ashes. Hasiru Dala, which works for the welfare of the waste pickers, told TNIE that the centre had no electricity which could lead to short circuit. "The centre used solar power. It recycles dry waste and almost 90 per cent was sent to the aggregators for reuse," said Bianca, Livelihood Manager, Hasiru Dala.

The entire ward's dry waste used to come to the centre, which weighed around 80 metric tonnes per month which were segregated by the women. Kumuda was devastated by the incident. "All my hard work is gone but I am determined to rebuild it. I need the support of the BBMP, elected representatives of JP Nagar and the citizens of Ward 177 to stand by me as they always have," she said, adding that she has incurred Rs 10 lakh loss.

The centre was also a learning space for students, academics, policy makers and citizens to witness how decentralized waste management can be a boon to an area's cleanliness and promote sustainability. Kumuda had built the centre by taking loans from Self Help Groups (SHGs) and has to repay the loan despite the fire.

The NGO has requested the Bruhat Bengaluru Mahanagara Palike (BBMP) to restore the DWCC infrastructure and for the re-construction to begin within a week and to provide all DWCCs in the city with Fire Insurance and provide compensation for the 16 women for at least two weeks.

Kolkata man cured of rare disease in city hosp

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE

A 66-year-old wheelchair-bound man from Kolkata, who was suffering from a rare central nervous system (CNS) Whipple's disease since 2017, was treated successfully at a private hospital in Bengaluru after multiple misdiagnosis earlier.

The patient suffered from headaches and weakness for which he was consulting a doctor at his hometown, but even being on medication for a year, his condition deteriorated. He was unable to raise his arms above his head followed by reduced walking ability, drooping of eyelids, nasal speech, temporalis atrophy (thinning or loss of temporal muscle tissue) and difficulty in swallowing.

According Fortis Hospital doctors in Bengaluru, he was misdiagnosed many times and even became wheelchair-bound due to delay in treatment.

Dr Chandran Gnanamuthu, senior consultant (Neurology), diagnosed him with a CNS Whipple's disease after performing a series of tests. The doctor explained that it is a rare illness caused by a type of bacteria which is usually fatal if not treated on time.

Patients with Whipple's disease are administered with long-term antibiotics to cure any infection of the brain. The patient was given intravenous ceftriaxone (2 gm) and also medication for fever, acid reflux and anti-nausea for four days. The medication helped stabilise the patient's condition within a short span and he was discharged after four days. He has been asked to continue taking his medication.

Vultures still wait for new home

PURAN CHOUDHARY @ Bengaluru

LONG-billed vultures will have to wait longer to find a new home in Karnataka. The Bannerghatta National Park (BNP) is still awaiting approval from the Central Zoo Authority of India (CZA) to open the Vulture Breeding Centre in the park.

The government had announced the breeding centre in the 2020 budget allotting ₹130 crore, but the plan is yet to materialise. The number of vultures has been dwindling in the state. It is categorised as critically endangered on the IUCN Red List since 2002 because of kidney failure caused by diclofenac poisoning. In a survey conducted along the borders of Tamil Nadu, Kerala and Karnataka, 246 species of these endangered birds were found.

Deputy Conservator of Forests, BNP, Prabhakar Priyadarshi said, "We've arranged for everything and are constantly following it up." The centre should have opened by the end of 2022, said the department. The vultures were supposed to be transported from Pinjore Vulture Conservation in Haryana, said Priyadarshi.

Additional Principal Chief Conservator of Forests (Wildlife) said to TNIE, "We've been waiting for months to hear from the CZA."

Siddu govt will probe all scams under BJP rule, says minister

2.5 lakh vacancies will be filled soon: Priyank

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
@ Bengaluru

WITH MB Patil, a minister in the Siddaramaiah cabinet, issuing a statement on Sunday that the new government will probe alleged scams in the BJP government, the ruling party is trying to score brownie points.

"In a private conversation with us, Chief Minister Siddaramaiah said investigations should be conducted in every department," Patil, a staunch supporter of the CM, told reporters. Controversies, including the recruitment in the police sub-inspector (PSI) posts, irrigation department and bribery alleged by the contractors, will be probed. "We will take the investigations to their logical end and ensure that the guilty, irrespective of them being political leaders or officials, are punished" he said.

The statements also started coming in from other members of the Siddaramaiah camp, like former KPCC president Dinesh Gundurao and senior leader Basavaraj Rayareddy.

Rayareddy said Siddaramaiah wants to give a transparent government.

Political observers said Siddarmaiah wants to maintain his clean image and the talk of investigations has come ahead of the first legislature session beginning on Monday. It could also be an attempt to extend his purported 30-month term to a full five-year period, they added.

It could also be a tactic to tackle the opposition BJP, which is likely to dig out the alleged old scams including the Arkavathy Layout land denotification (redo), to corner Siddaramaiah, political pundits said.

Minister Priyank Kharge said the Bitcoin scam too will be investigated. Kharge had in November 2021 levelled serious allegations against the previous BJP government, alleging that big leaders were involved in the scam after Srikrishna alias Shriki was arrested. He had then tweeted, "The accused Shriki had hacked into 3 bitcoin exchanges 14 websites including 10 poker websites and exploited malwares. The total of which is not disclosed but is speculated to be about Rs 2283 crore."

On Sunday, in a series of tweets, the Chittapur MLA said he has tasked the Kalaburagi city police commissioner and SP to curb corruption at police stations, check illegal gambling and betting, sand mining and drug peddling. He also asked the top police officials to stop traffic violations, rein in rowdies and stop harassment to the public.

He said 2.5 lakh vacancies in different government departments will be filled as soon as possible. This will help eradicate the issue of unemployment in the state to an extent and all departments concerned will take up the recruitment process, he added.

BERTH BOOKING HEATS UP, LEADERS MEET DKS, SIDDU

DEVARAJ B HIREHALLI
@ Bengaluru

A day after Siddaramaiah and DK Shivakumar were sworn-in as chief minister and deputy chief minister, respectively, along with eight other cabinet ministers, many leaders visited Siddaramaiah on Sunday to book their berths.

Satish Jarkiholi, BZ Zameer Ahmed Khan and MB Patil, all from the Siddaramaiah camp, have become ministers. Some leaders also met Shivakumar on Sunday with the party high command likely to give nod for cabinet expansion in a week.

According to sources, the party high command, Siddaramaiah and Shivakumar will have equal power in selecting ministers. It was clear from the first batch that Dr G Parameshwara, Priyank Kharge, KH Muniyappa, KJ George and Ramalinga Reddy were picked by the high command. Shivakumar was left sulking as he could not stop Zameer Ahmed's induction.

During an event on the death anniversary of former prime minister Rajiv Gandhi at the KPCC office, minister MB Patil was busy chatting with Siddaramaiah on the dais which annoyed Shivakumar, who said, "Do not disturb when I am speaking", sending a message that indiscipline will not be tolerated irrespective of the leader's stature.

Meanwhile, senior legislator Basavaraj Rayareddy, a strong contender for a ministerial post and also as the speaker, called on Siddaramaiah, and later batted for a five-year term for the latter.

Congress high command has been vacillating on the rotational chief minister formula which has failed in states like Rajasthan.

Shivakumar supporters have interpreted AICC general secretary (organisation) KC Venugopal's statement that "Shivakumar will be the sole DyCM and continue as KPCC president until after 2024 LS polls", that internally, the top brass has committed to a power-sharing formula. AICC president Mallikarjun Khage might have assured Shivakumar about the calculation after which Shivakumar agreed to be the vice-captain, a Congress leader told TNIE.

GRANDPA SIDDU ATTENDS GRADUATION CEREMONY

Bengaluru: A day after being sworn-in as chief minister, Siddaramaiah attended his grandson's graduation ceremony at Canadian International School in Bengaluru on Sunday. Earlier, he paid his tributes to former prime minister Rajiv Gandhi on his death anniversary at the KPCC office in Bengaluru. His grandson, Dhawan Rakesh passed Class 12. Rakesh had also joined Siddaramaiah during the latter's campaign. "My grandson completed his Class 12 from Canadian International School. The school authorities have organised a farewell for the graduating class of 2023. I was happy to be part of the event," he tweeted.

Bengaluru MLAs cast 'cabi-net', chances bleak

K SHIVA KUMAR @ Mysuru

WHILE the tussle continues over selecting the other members of the Chief Minister Siddaramaiah-led cabinet, Bengaluru MLAs may miss the bus this time.

In previous Congress and BJP governments, there were at least six to nine ministers from Bengaluru, but the situation has changed now as senior legislators are exerting tremendous pressure on Siddaramaiah and the Congress high command.

Senior legislators from Bengaluru like Ramalinga Reddy, KJ George and BZ Zameer Ahmed Khan have made it to the first batch of ministers to be sworn-in, but many others including Krishna Byre Gowda, Dinesh Gundu Rao, M Krishnappa, V Shivanna, BK Hariprasad from the Legislative Council, are also in the race.

The previous Congress government had six ministers in the cabinet while the BS Yediyurappa government had accommodated seven with plum posts. Now, 122 of 135 MLAs in Congress are from outside Bengaluru. Belagavi has 11 MLAs, Mysuru nine, Chitradurga five, and many have also won from Kittur and Kalyana Karnataka regions. This is making it increasingly difficult for the high command to settle for the correct balance. It may also compel the high command to deny half a dozen berths to Bengaluru lawmakers as many MLAs have called on Siddaramaiah and the AICC chief Mallikarjun Kharge, demanding equal representation of communities like Lingayats, Dalits and Muslims in the cabinet who have given overwhelming support to Congress.

From Urs to Hegde, trend changed

There was no one from Bengaluru in the then chief minister Devaraj Urs cabinet as he believed that since the chief minister and cabinet ministers reside in Bengaluru, they are always accessible to Bengalureans.

However, he inducted only one minister from Bengaluru to share the Food and Civil supplies department responsibilities after the Emergency was imposed. The trend changed after Janata Party headed by Ramakrishna Hegde came to power. Chandrashekar, Thimme Gowda, Jeevaraj Alva were elected from the city in 1983, including Hegde himself from Basavanagudi in 1985.

AFTER its disappointing loss in the polls, Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) leaders have convened a series of meeting with the party's Election Committee members and MLAs to review the results.

BJP Karnataka in-charge Arun Singh, who conducted meetings with the committee members, MLAs, candidates who lost elections and district office-bearers, told reporters that the BJP will work as a positive and efficient opposition in the state. He said a meeting was held with district unit presidents and in-charge leaders to seek information. He also demanded implementation of the various guarantees announced by the Congress in its manifesto.

On the results, Singh said BJP's vote share has not decreased. "The vote share of the JDS has moved to the Congress, which got more seats. We expected more seats in the assembly polls. Voter turnout increased in some constituencies, while some saw low turnout," he said.

Asked about who would be leader of the opposition, Singh said the parliamentary board will decide. Prior to this, party MLAs will choose the opposition leader. He said the central government is working hard for the all-round progress of the country, including the poor, farmers, women and SC/ST communities, and this would be conveyed to the people of Karnataka.

BJP National General Secretary CT Ravi said the Congress is changing its stand after winning elections. "Earlier, they said all unemployed youths would get Rs 3,000, but now they have placed a condition that the scheme is for those who pass out this academic year," Ravi said. He also stressed that if Congress withdraws the anti-cow slaughter law, it will be against the Constitution.

J&K most militarised state after scrapping of Article 370, says Mufti

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
@ Bengaluru

LAUNCHING a tirade at Prime Minister Narendra Modi, former Jammu and Kashmir chief minister Mehbooba Mufti on Sunday said that the central government has changed the logo of G20, and replaced it with lotus, and for publicity claims that normalcy has been restored in the Valley after the abrogation of Article 370.

The G20 summit is scheduled to be held from May 22-24 in Srinagar. During an interaction with mediapersons at the Press Club of Bangalore, Mufti said, "G20 logo should have been replaced with something related to the country and not a party." She alleged that Modi's decisions regarding Kashmir have eventually resulted in China's intervention. The PDP chief hoped that SAARC would find some solutions to Valley's problems. She reiterated that she will never contest the Assembly elections till Article 370 is restored.

"Today, Jammu and Kashmir is the most militarised state where harassment takes place in the name of frisking and security, especially ahead of the G20 summit. I spoke to Bihar CM Nitish Kumar and others to draw their attention towards what is happening in the Valley," she said. Commenting on the thumping victory of Congress in Karnataka, Mufti said that the party should reach out to smaller parties to ensure a united contest against BJP in the 2024 Lok Sabha polls. She warned that what the central government has done to the Delhi government through an ordinance could happen with other state governments.

'2k withdrawal linked to polls'

J&K former CM Mehbooba Mufti said that the decision of the Reserve Bank of India to withdraw Rs 2,000 currency notes might help in money laundering by converting black money into white, making it easier for BJP to fund their election expenses. "This has been done a year before elections. It was a sudden decision that will not benefit the common people," she said. Asked if the decision will backfire on the central government, she said that unless people choose to dump communal politics and focus on development, nothing will harm the BJP.

After rain fury, farmers stare at massive losses

V VELAYUDHAM
@ Chikkaballapur

HEAVY rain and hail storms on Sunday afternoon for over two hours resulted in massive crop damage in Chikkaballapur district that supplies fruits and vegetables to the entire state. Tomatoes, capsciscum, beans, mangoes, and grapes have been ruined as sources said that losses are expected to be in lakhs.

The damage could disrupt supply of fruits and vegetables, resulting in rise in prices. Rain fury has hit various places including Sidlaghatta, Chintamani and surrounding villages, where several trees were uprooted, traffic came to a halt for hours, and houses in low-lying areas were flooded.

Mango and grape growers are now facing acute losses after gusty winds broke fences. Mango farmers had already started harvesting Banganapalle , Benisha, Rajgira and Raspuri varieties. After rain, they fear that their produce will be sold at a low price.

In Chintamani taluk of Siddimath, Doddanatta railway underbridge was submerged and the villagers had to take a long deviation to reach their villages. The nurseries belonging to Shinganahalli Lakshmana were damaged, and the farmers are now demanding compensation from the government and the horticulture department.

Navy, fisherfolk in choppy waters after meeting over plaints

SUBHASH CHANDRA NS
@ Karwar

FOLLOWING complaints from fishermen, the Indian Navy officials held talks with local fishermen in and around Karwar, and assured them that grievances will be looked into.

In their complaint to Uttara Kannada Deputy Commissioner, the fishermen, under the aegis of Meenugarara Sangarsha Samithi, alleged that they are being discouraged or driven away from the waters within 1km radius by naval personnel. "They come in high-speed boats and scare away the fishermen," the letter signed by Vinayak Lakshman Harikantra, president of the samithi, read.

They demanded that the naval personnel should not harass the fishermen on the pretext of security as it will hit their livelihood.

"The naval officials denied allegations of harassment. We also showed them some video clips of the incidents. Then, they said the fishermen should not come within a 1km radius of the fixed boundary of the naval base to which we objected. We said that the fish is available in that area," said Harikantra.

Coast Police Inspector Nischal Prakash was present during the meeting. Naval officials said that several vessels including aircraft carriers are docked in the base, and so the fishing boats should stay away. According to sources, the naval officials have assured that they will invite at least 5 fishermen from each fishing village and hold talks with them.

Earlier, the naval officials had said that they would talk to the leaders of the fishermen and find a solution, which was rejected as the leaders do not venture into waters.

Big boost for national security, says expert

THE project, earlier known as Air Defence Ship (ADS), was planned for a 20,000 tonne displacement. However in later stages, it was enhanced to 37,500 tonnes to allow it to carry fighter jets like MiG 29K and the designation was changed to Indigenous Aircraft Carrier (IAC).

The project was delayed due to several reasons and finally it was entrusted to CSL considering its modern infrastructure. The ship was designed by the Directorate of Naval Design which was its first assignment.

Bengaluru-based defence expert Girish Linganna said berthing of INS Vikrant at the new aircraft carrier terminal is a significant feat of infrastructure and will have important implications for India's national security and economic development.

"The terminal has a two-deck configuration, with the upper deck providing space for the aircraft carrier to moor and the lower deck providing space for support facilities such as fuel and ammunition bunkers. The terminal also has a number of features that are designed to improve ship support, such as a crane that can lift up to 100 tonnes and a water jet system that can clean the hull of the aircraft carrier," he said.

The Congress rode to power on the five 'guarantee schemes' or 'freebies' for the people. Here is what it will mean in numbers

COST OF BIG 5 VOTECATCHERS

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE

SOON after the first cabinet meeting, Chief Minister Siddaramaiah said the Karnataka government would implement all the five guarantees announced in the Congress manifesto during elections. Siddaramaiah said the government was paying Rs 56,000 crore annually towards loan, including principal amount and interest, to implement its many schemes. The government might now need an additional Rs 50,000 crore for the guarantee schemes, which can be done by increasing revenue targets and cutting down on wasteful expenditure, and will not have financial implications, he said.

However, economists say that politics and economics are two different things. They expressed concern over the sustainability of the schemes, and how much they will burden the exchequer. "Ultimately, the amount that will be used to implement the guarantee schemes is the taxpayers' money. It will be no surprise if state taxes on items increase after some time, and the deficit in the budget increases. There is no need to give 200 units of free power or Rs 2,000 for all women. Many don't need it. While it is required to help the economically weak with travel, and youth with money, the government must parallelly make all efforts to ensure they get employment and also empower the downtrodden," said an economist who is working closely with the government.

Free power will cost govt dear

BOSKY KHANNA @ Bengaluru

THE Congress' announcement that 200 units of free power would be given to every household worked like magic, and got the party a major chunk of votes. However, officials and experts have expressed concern over the financial implications of this scheme.

They say the government is already giving subsidies for IP sets, and has various schemes like Kuteera Jyoti and Bhagya Jyoti. In the last budget, Amrit Jyoti scheme was announced, but was not implemented. "The model is a little different from what was adopted by the AAP. Here, the government has announced free 200 units of free power to all households, irrespective of income. This will be a huge burden on the government," said an official.

Experts said that implementation of the new scheme for five years will be a challenge. Now that the government has committed to it and even came to power on the scheme, it cannot roll back or place conditions. "As per the Karnataka Electricity Regulatory Commission (KERC), the average cost of power supply is Rs 9.12. The government will have to give 3848 MU of power free to domestic consumers every month, which will cost them Rs 3,509 crore per month, and Rs 42,108 crore annually. The government is already paying a subsidy amount of Rs 14,508 crore per annum, which excludes IP sets. The government cannot stop these subsidies and schemes to accommodate domestic consumers. Management of this new scheme would be a challenging task," said MG Prabhakar, chairman, FKCCI, Energy Committee.

Jolly bus ride for women

AKNISREE KARTHIK @ Bengaluru

CM Siddaramaiah has announced that women who are natives of Karnataka can avail of free bus rides in non-AC buses of BMTC and any state transport corporation buses, anywhere in the state.

This has given rise to multiple questions on implementation. Shaheen Shasa of Bengaluru Bus Prayanikara Vedike, a bus commuters' rights forum, said that free travel in government buses should not be considered a 'freebie' but an investment in women who get the freedom to travel independently. She urged that bus travel be made free for all women across the state, without discrimination.

"BMTC has a daily ridership of around 35 lakh. A rough estimate is that around 40 per cent of the daily passengers are women, and free travel for women in BMTC buses might cost the government approximately Rs 1,000 crore every year," she said.

A KSRTC official said they don't have data on the number of female passengers. "Whether free travel is for all women or are there any conditions for eligibility? Will free travel be restricted to a few kilometres or can women travel freely across the state? The state government has not yet given any clarity on eligibility for free bus travel yet," the official said.

Another official said that going by face value, execution will be a challenge, not just financially but also implementation. Reserved seats for women will have to be strictly maintained.

Pet scheme to fix malnutrition

MOHAMMED YACOOB @ Bengaluru

THE government will not go back on its word on implementation of Anna Bhagya scheme, where every BPL (Below Poverty Line) household will be given 10kg of free grains.

Vasudev Sharma, Executive Director, Child Rights Trust, said everyone welcomes such a scheme, and contended that almost all governments have worked for food security.

"In the 1960s, ration cards were introduced. The one-point agenda was to address hunger and malnutrition. Even though food is available, the issue of malnutrition is not addressed, especially among children and adolescent girls. To fight malnutrition, it is necessary to have such a scheme. Some may take a dig at such schemes, but those people are not aware of the reality of society," said Sharma.

Not just rice, ragi or jowar, the government should also give oil and pulses, and charge a minimal fee, if nor free, as the move will address malnutrition among a large section of people, he added. With regard to the challenge before the government in taking such a scheme to the right people and avoiding middlemen or misuse, Sharma said those who are ineligible, or who can afford food and ration, must give up their BPL cards.

"Awareness and conscience is needed. Secondly, there could be corruption like illegal hoarding of food stock, fudging bills and selling grains to provision stores, giving old stock or ration that is spoiled due to rain, or is infested with insects and rodents," Sharma added.

Give allowance, skill them too

CHETAN MG @ Bengaluru

THE Yuva Nidhi scheme of the new Congress government guarantees an unemployment allowance of Rs 3,000 for unemployed graduates and and Rs 1,500 for diploma holders, till they find a job or for two years maximum. The government announced that those who completed their studies this academic year are eligible to avail of the scheme.

Director of the Institute for Social and Economic Change Prof. D Rajasekhar felt it is a good scheme as it helps unemployed youths lead a dignified life with confidence and self-respect, and the allowance will also help the economy to some extent. "Countries like Germany, Denmark, Norway and many others have such schemes, and they also offer skill development courses and assistance in finding suitable jobs.

The state government should help the youth hone skills and assist them in finding jobs. Else, the scheme may turn out to be a burden on the state exchequer, and beneficiaries may demand that the allowance be extended till they find a job, even after two years are up, as they would become dependent on the allowance," he said.

However, he added that the government must put a robust system in place to avoid misuse of the scheme. "There are several systems already in place to track payments to bank accounts, but the government should use them effectively to avoid misuse of the scheme," he suggested.

Empowering women with ₹2K

ASHWINI M SRIPAD @ Bengaluru

WOMEN constitute 50 per cent of the total voters in Karnataka, and the Gruha Lakshmi struck a chord with them when the Congress leader Priyanka Gandhi announced it during the election campaign.

Under the scheme, the state government will give financial aid of Rs 2,000 per month to the woman head of every household. According to the government, the scheme has been chalked out as the cost of living and purchasing items, especially essentials, has shot up.

But since it is not a one-time fund, it will be a considerable challenge for the Congress government as it is a "universal" scheme and caters to all women.

A senior officer from the state government, on condition of anonymity, said this will be a huge additional burden on the state government as it is not a one-time allocation.

The government has committed to give the amount every month to every woman. A sum of Rs 2,000 might help women, especially in rural and semi-urban areas, manage their monthly groceries.

However, it is a challenge to identify such people. "We will be able to get some clarity only when detailed guidelines are issued. This scheme might help socially and economically, but not financially," the officer said.

The amount will be sent to women's bank accounts linked to Aadhaar number, to ensure transparency.

Pregnant elephant shot dead by 2 estate owners in Kodagu

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
@ Madikeri

A wild elephant was allegedly shot dead by two estate owners in the Kushalnagar limits of Kodagu.

A female elephant, approximately aged 18 to 20 years was killed in the incident. The elephant was pregnant and a post-mortem report revealed that it was due to deliver the calf shortly. The accused in the case are absconding.

On Sunday morning, the carcass of the expectant elephant was found lying inside the estate owned by Kunjilanda Jagadish in Raslpura village near Kushalnagar. Kushalnagar division forest department officials were alerted and the spot was visited by ACF Gopal, RFO Shivaram and others. Preliminary investigations revealed that the wild elephant was shot dead by miscreants, even as empty bullet cartridges were found lying at the crime spot.

"The elephant has suffered several bullet marks on its body. A major bullet was shot at its right ear piercing the brain. Apart from this, small bullet marks were found across its body," confirmed RFO Shivaram. He explained that the spot was inspected by dog squads and the dogs led to the houses of two estate owners. "The dog squad led us to the house of accused Kunjilanda Jagadish. Further, the dog squad also led us to the neighbouring estate owned by Dimple, where empty bullet cartridges have been retrieved," he explained. Sources confirmed that the accused have been booked under the Arms Act by the police and the Wildlife Protection Act by the forest department. The incident is suspected to have taken place during late night hours on Saturday. Post-mortem was conducted and the calf inside the pregnant elephant was removed. Both the carcasses were buried in the estate limits.

Pinarayi's report card is fake, says Satheesan

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @ Kochi

A day after the chief minister released the progress report of his government's performance, Leader of Opposition V D Satheesan on Sunday termed it a "fake" document full of "false claims".

The government failed to fulfil even 100 of the total 900 promises the LDF had made in its election manifesto, he told reporters in Kochi. The government's claim that three lakh new job opportunities were created in the state is false. So is its claim on the number of new enterprises. "We questioned the government about this false number in the Assembly. It's the sum of the number of licence applications for new enterprises and that of those who have taken bank loans," he said.

The government as a whole, and the home ministry under the chief minister in particular, is a total failure, Satheesan alleged, and cited the suspension of an "innocent" police officer as an example of this. The Leader of Opposition was referring to the suspension of IG P Vijayan on charges of leaking out the details of the transfer of Elathur train arson case accused.

Kerala min in soup over Bishops' Council remark

ENS @ Kozhikode

KERALA Forest Minister AK Saseedharan has landed in a controversy after his alleged statement against the Kerala Catholic Bishops' Council (KCBC) on the recent bison attack deaths in the state.

Saseedharan was forced to call two press conferences on the same day in order to clarify his point raised against the KCBC. In the first press conference on Sunday morning, the minister accused some people for playing politics with the dead bodies of those who died in the bison attack. He said that such bargaining is not in keeping with the tradition of KCBC and the movement which implemented peace and harmony should preserve the tradition and it is not right to bargain or playing with the emotions of the dead.

The minister's first argument was that such people are trying to take political advantage. But after the protest against the minister's statement, he corrected himself within hours by calling a second press meet on the same day, where he said he did not threaten anyone, instead he was trying to communicate that using the emotions of the families of dead people in the attack is unethical. The essence of what he said is that there should not be a protest to bargain, as the government is ready to hear the pleas of the public.

RBI'S ₹2000 MOVE UNCLEAR AND CONFUSING, WILL HASSLE CITIZENS

It feels like a case of throwing the baby out with the bathwater. The government's latest 'masterstroke' of withdrawing ₹2,000 notes, more than six years after first starting their circulation, has bemused people more than shocked them. The purpose of the move has not been articulated clearly and appears to be a knee-jerk reaction. If the objective is to nab those hoarding black money in ₹2,000 notes—as many commentators suggest, including some of the pro-government voices—there are other means of cracking down on tax evaders rather than shaking the economy now and then to curb the supposed prevalence of black money.

By the government's admission, ₹2,000 notes account for only ₹3.62 lakh crore, 10.8% of notes in circulation, or 1.3% of the FY23 GDP. Unless it believes the entire ₹3.62 lakh crore held in ₹2,000 notes is black money, there is no justification for this surgical strike. The fact that the circulation of ₹2,000 notes halved from ₹6.73 lakh crore on March 31, 2018, to ₹3.62 lakh crore by March 31, 2023, is testimony enough that these notes would have diminished on their own. Not all cash is black and neither is holding cash in ₹2,000 notes illegal. This newspaper reported on Sunday that many traders and MSME promoters keep cash for working capital requirements. Much of it would be in ₹2,000 notes. Many labour-intensive businesses like construction and textiles pay their daily wage labourers in cash. So, holding cash in ₹2,000 notes is not unusual for logistical reasons.

Two days after the announcement, there is already a lot of confusion. Social media was abuzz with speculation that one would have to furnish identity proof to exchange the ₹2,000 notes in banks. SBI had to clarify that there is no such need. The confusion and chaos might intensify from May 23 onwards when banks start exchanging or depositing the notes. Besides, nobody seems to know what happens to the ₹2,000 notes after September 30, 2023. If they remain legal tender, what was the need for the September 30 deadline?

With this latest move, the government has again set the cat among the pigeons. People would be hassled, the economy would suffer, and, worst of all, it might shake people's faith in the rupee. But the government refuses to learn its lessons even as its action inconveniences its citizens.

CONGRESS WON ON 5 VOWS, NOW AIM FOR PUBLIC GOOD

Almost all of Karnataka is waiting for the implementation of the five guarantees promised by the Congress high command during the poll campaign—without a doubt one of the main factors that returned the party to power with a thumping victory where it won more than twice the number of seats than the BJP. The party high command had announced that if voted to power, the newly elected Congress government would approve the implementation of the five guarantees in the first cabinet meeting. Siddaramaiah did just that on Saturday immediately after the swearing-in ceremony when the newly inducted 10-member cabinet he now heads met for the first time.

The promised schemes are—Gruha Jyothi (200 power units free to every household); Gruha Lakshmi (₹2,000 to every woman head of a family); Anna Bhagya (10 kg rice every month to every member of BPL family); Yuva Nidhi (₹3,000 per month to unemployed graduates and ₹1,500 to unemployed diploma holders in the 18–25 age group for two years); and Shakti (free travel for women in state corporation buses across Karnataka). These may cost the government ₹50,000 crore per year. Chief Minister Siddaramaiah is confident about raising the amount to support the schemes. Expectedly, in some parts of the state, people whose homes have consumed less than 200 units of power have already refused to pay their electricity bills. They hope to make the most of the Gruha Jyothi guarantee. Why pay when freebies are coming your way?

But there are concerns, especially about schemes like Gruha Lakshmi and Yuva Nidhi, which involve direct benefit transfer. Will the intended beneficiaries really benefit? Gruha Lakshmi in a patriarchal society could compromise the benefits intended for the women heads of households, with the money possibly being used for wrong purposes by the men in the house. The dole for unemployed graduates and diploma holders under Yuva Nidhi raises similar concerns of potential misuse linked to the effects of lack of employment.

The new government, still in its formative stages, may do well to remember that the democratic principle of the welfare state holds those in power accountable to the people and that the government is, at best, a facilitator of public good. While eyeing a poll victory when promising the guarantees, the new government now needs to convert its words into actions.

QUICK TAKE

PUNISH BAD DRUG MAKERS

Thirty-five common drug samples failed quality tests the Central Drugs Standard Control Organisation conducted this month. One drug came up spurious. Last month, 48 drugs failed random testing. They included highly sought BP-lowering drugs. The failure figures for January and February were 67 and 59, respectively. Coming on top of complaints about Indian-made drugs abroad, it is a severe setback and exposes the lack of oversight. It is high time the government's universal seal of quality becomes mandatory for all manufactured drugs. Working towards it, the government must lay down rigid rules for pharma companies found tampering with data integrity.

While the Kukis fear raids by organised mobs from the Meitei community, Meitei farming villages at the base of the hills remain apprehensive of attacks by Kuki militants

THE MYRIAD HUES OF MANIPUR'S INTERNAL TUSSLES

PRADIP PHANJOUBAM

Editor of Imphal Review of Arts and Politics

SOUMYADIP SINHA

Two weeks after the communal violence between two major ethnic groups in Manipur—the Kukis and the Meiteis—the state, though calmer, remains tense, with as many as 45,000 displaced people still staying at shelters in different places in the state and outside, and the last rites of 73 bodies in various mortuaries yet to be completed.

Not all displaced people are direct victims of the riots, but villagers on both sides have fled to where they believe is safer. While the Kukis fear raids by organised mobs from the larger Meitei community, Meitei farming villages at the base of the hills remain apprehensive of attacks by Kuki militants, who are in a Suspension of Operation (SoO) truce with the government.

Under the SoO agreement, there are 25 Kuki militant organisations in two groupings—KNO and UPF. Cadres are allowed to keep their weapons, but only within the confines of designated camps supervised by the Assam Rifles. Each member gets a monthly stipend of ₹5,000.

The SoO understanding between Indian security forces and Kuki militants was informally reached in the 1990s, not long after another bout of bloody ethnic clashes between the Nagas and the Kukis—in which the Kukis suffered casualties disproportionately. The state government then was not made party to this, causing some hiccups in the larger counter-insurgency strategy. In 2008, this was solved, with SoO becoming an official tripartite agreement between the Kuki militants, the Centre and the state government. Some had speculated that this was also a counterweight to the influence of Naga and Meitei insurgents.

Thankfully, Meitei insurgents have stayed away from the present bloodletting. CorCom, a coordination committee they formed, instead came out with a statement which appealed for a return to normalcy, alleging that a gameplan of the Indian government to fragment Manipur's society is the hidden cause for the present crisis.

On the other hand, 10 Kuki MLAs, currently outside the state, are demanding a separate administration for the Kukis on the basis that the Kukis cannot live together with the Meiteis again. They have also charged that Manipur Chief Minister N Biren Singh and Rajya Sabha MP Leishemba Sanajaoba (both from the Meitei community) masterminded the recent carnage by sponsoring two little-known Meitei organisations—Arambai Tenggol and Meitei Leepun.

The spark for the May 3 riots came from Churachandpur district, dominated by the Kukis and aligned tribes, when a solidarity rally of Nagas and Kukis to protest a proposal for inclusion of Meiteis in the Scheduled Tribes list turned violent. As the rally was concluding, a rumour that a Kuki war memorial site on the outskirts of Churachandpur township had been burned down by Meiteis—led to a mob rampage. Meitei settlements in and around Torbung, a village in the border area between Churachandpur and Bishnupur, were razed.

The memorial site is intact but pictures and videos of a tyre found burning near the gate is now available. Only an inquiry can determine if the incineration of the tyre matches the time that it is said to have begun burning.

When images of the arson attacks started spreading, and there also seemed no sign that the government was making any effort to take control, the violence spread. In Imphal, everything was normal until about 7 pm, before an arson case in the New Lambulane locality was reported. By the next day, the violence spread to several Kuki- and Meitei-dominated districts.

Why have only the Kukis responded so aggressively and not the Nagas? In the past, there have also been extreme tensions between the Nagas and the Meiteis, like when Thuingaleng Muivah, leader of the powerful Naga insurgent group NSCN(IM), was denied entry into Manipur by the state government—but such incidents did not result in communal riots.

The answer may lie in certain developments in recent times. One is the revival of an old narrative that the Kukis are nomadic and not indigenous to Manipur. Muivah has said this in several recent public statements as well. Other rivals also added to this, insulting the Kukis indiscriminately with adjectives like "refugees", "foreigners", etc., making this an open sore for the latter.

Kuki villages also have a tendency to proliferate because of a peculiar landholding tradition where village chiefs are sole owners of their villages, inducing capable villagers to leave and set up their own villages. This being so, even government initiatives such as the eviction of encroachers from reserved forests, the fight against Manipur's new scourge of poppy plantations, or the push for citizenship registration, etc., came to be seen as targeting the Kukis.

On the other hand, the stated reason for the Meitei demand for ST status is so they are not alienated from their land. They also see injustice in the fact there is no creamy layer clause in the ST reservation system, thereby giving ST colleagues in similar or even higher income brackets a head start in matters of job pursuits and tax savings.

A skewed land revenue administration system inherited from colonial times—separating revenue flatlands from non-revenue hills—has also pushed the Meiteis against the wall. While everybody can settle in the Imphal Valley, traditionally the Meiteis' home and which forms 10% of the state's area, the Meiteis are prohibited from settling in the hills which constitute 90% of the area. As land scarcity is confronted by a burgeoning population, there is an increasing sense of siege amongst these communities. Though it is unlikely they would be eager to settle in the hills even if they were free to do so, the very knowledge that they are prohibited to do so has heightened their claustrophobia.

Three decades ago, of the 20 hill constituencies in Manipur's 60-member Assembly, Nagas generally won 12 and Kukis 8. Today it is 10 each. Even a little influx of voters from outside can alter the balance further in these small constituencies. The examples of Kangpokpi, Chandel and Tengnoupal constituencies illustrate the potential for such a future conflict: Kangpokpi, once capable of having Naga, Kuki or even Nepali representatives, has today become a Kuki stronghold. Tengnoupal was once a Naga bastion, but today it has a Kuki representative. Chandel, once under a Naga grip, is now finely balanced between the Nagas and the Kukis.

Collective insecurities combined to make just the right mix for the storm on May 3. The question remains: what next? If the underlying causes of these troubles remain, there is no guarantee that more explosions like these will not happen in the future.

GOLD BENEATH THE GRIME

RENUKA NARAYANAN

FAITHLINE

An interesting Jataka comes to mind this week that I would like to retell for its morally cheering quality. Aeons ago, there lived a very rich merchant family in a grand city somewhere in the Upper Gangetic Plain. The family lived in great splendour in their magnificent town house with its large inner courtyard and its own temple. Acres of gardens surrounded the house and large cowsheds and stables stood at the back.

The family gave generously to orphans and homeless people, to the king's hospice and to the charitable projects of temples. They supported poor students and indigent widows and contributed handsomely to the upkeep of rest houses for travellers and pilgrims. They often went to their pleasant country estate upriver, where they put up swings in the mango orchards. They swam, boated, picnicked, played games of pachisi, sang songs and told stories over moonlight suppers, all three generations of them together—grandparents, uncles, aunts, cousins and children.

However, the fortunes of this family became greatly reduced when all the men and many women died one by one. The servants went away to find other work. Only an old grandmother and her little granddaughter were left. They escaped starvation by hiring themselves out as domestic workers to a few families.

Since they were too old and too young respectively to do heavy work, they did small kitchen chores for which they were paid accordingly. Their mornings became an endless round of light cleaning, peeling and cutting vegetables, washing and drying the whole spices, picking kilos of rice and lentils clean and helping to make pickles and papads. They were given leftover food after the families they worked for had eaten their morning meal. It was a massive comedown for those who had been waited on all their lives and never lacked anything, but they were glad not to have to beg.

At this time, the Bodhisattva or Buddha in a previous birth was a trader who worked in the city with another trader. This business partner was secretly less scrupulous than the Bodhisattva but the Bodhisattva knew nothing about it. Their agreement was to divide the town into territories and enter each other's area only after the other had left.

One afternoon, the greedy trader came down the former fine family's street calling aloud his wares. He had rare and costly things to offer like necklaces of foreign coins, coral strings and chains of fine glass beads imported from across the Eastern Sea.

Now nearly eight years old, the little girl had been taught her manners since she was barely two. She missed her mother and father, having lost them both in a boat wreck. But she managed not to complain about having to work so hard or not having enough to eat or wearing abominable old cast-offs. Nor did she complain about being spoken crossly to sometimes by the spoiled children of the houses she worked in. With the considerate behaviour of the well brought-up, she knew that doing so would have embarrassed and hurt her grandmother and so she shed tears only in private.

P RAVIKUMAR

> When the little girl ran in, the grandmother whispered to the trader that she knew the bowl was worthless. But she pleaded with him to do the best he could, to give a very simple necklace or at least a bead bangle to the child

But an instinct for fine things was in her blood, so when she saw the trader's pretty necklaces she suddenly longed to have something nice of her own. So she begged her grandmother to trade what she could.

Touched to be asked, the grandmother rummaged in the storeroom of their crumbling house. She noticed a grimy bowl in a corner and brought it to the trader. One discreet scratch with a needle and the trader knew he held a bowl of solid gold. Plotting instantly to get it for almost nothing, he threw it back saying it was too worthless to trade and waited expectantly for the old lady to beg him to take it. But the old lady did no such thing for such a move simply did not occur to her.

Instead she withdrew quietly, little realising that it was the payasa bowl of the head of their family that had been put away after his death and become unrecognisably dirty. The little girl blinked back her disappointment and instead hugged her grandmother for trying.

When the Bodhisattva came by two hours after his wily business partner had left, the little girl did not dare accost him for fear of another snub. But he swung a handful of necklaces in such a friendly, jolly manner and smiled in such a kindly way, that she asked him to wait and called her grandmother. The grandmother brought the bowl back and handed it to the trader. She sent the little girl back to close the storeroom door so as to leave them alone for a minute.

When the little girl ran in, the grandmother whispered to the trader that she knew the bowl was worthless. But she pleaded with him to do the best he could, to give a very simple necklace or at least a bead bangle to the child.

"But who told you this bowl was worthless?" exclaimed the good trader, giving it a good rub and showing her its shine. Not only did he give them a fair deal for the golden bowl but he also obligingly paid cash for other things of value discovered in the storeroom. He even gifted the little girl a pretty glass bead necklace, just to please the child.

He went away with a clear conscience as usual, receiving many blessings from the grandmother and a radiant smile from the little girl, for the warm blanket so suddenly obtained from cold fate.

The greedy trader collapsed and died of rage when he found out. While the good trader was of course the Bodhisattva, the greedy trader who was not above trying to cheat widows and orphans was the Buddha's wicked cousin Devadatta.

This was the beginning of Devadatta's bitter and vengeful grudge against the Buddha through many births thereafter, carrying mountains of baggage and never being at peace for a moment in all those lifetimes.

RBI's decision

Economists say RBI's decision to end the circulation of ₹2,000 notes can have a disruptive effect on the economy especially vis-à-vis small traders, farmers, and MSMEs. We are in a cryptic condition with regards to what we have achieved from the introduction of these notes in 2016 and what we have to gain from the end of circulation. The economy need not be understood only by economic aces like Amartya Sen, Raghuram Rajan, etc. The objective of the government is still not clear.

Election preparations

Prabhu Chawla's Brand Modi needs regional franchises (May 21) is a fine analysis of the causes of BJP's dismal show in Karnataka. The general election is less than a year away and preparations must start now. Inadequate preparation and a delay in finalising on candidates led to the poor show in Karnataka.
Balasubramanyam, email

Regional parties

Prabhu Chawla's political analysis has purposely avoided some recent harmful trends in Indian politics. The unity of regional parties only for the sake of power sharing will be dangerous for the nation. These parties have divergent ideologies, castes, languages, etc. The present opposition unity is to grab power and thwart the growth of the country.

Mekedatu project

The Mekedatu project is a bone of contention between Karnataka and Tamil Nadu. As the former Opposition, the Congress undertook a padayatra demanding its implementation by the previous BJP government. Now that it has come to power, it will be interesting to see how it proceeds to implement the project.

Annamalai's efforts

Opposition leaders usually criticise the failures of the government and stop with that. State BJP leader Annamalai not only called for 80% closure of Tasmac shops but promised to provide a white paper to the government on increasing the revenue. He stands apart from other leaders with a strong vision of effective governance.

Taxing movies

State governments giving tax-free status to movies aligned with their ideology is dangerous. This will encourage producers to release films which are likely to please the powers that be. There should be some criteria as to when a movie deserves tax-free status.

Modi's visit will deepen ties with India: US

US Secy of State Anthony Blinken meets EAM Jaishankar on sidelines of the G7 summit, ahead of PM's visit in June

YESHI SELI @ New Delhi

PRIME Minister Narendra Modi on Sunday met US President Joe Biden on the sidelines of the G7 Summit in Hiroshima with a warm hug. Later, the duo met again during the Quad Leaders' Summit.

No bilateral meeting, however, did take place. But the PM's upcoming visit to the US in June is expected more than cover up missed opportunity for a bilateral meeting.

Anthony Blinken

Taking the upcoming visit of the Prime Minister forward, the US Secretary of State Anthony Blinken met External Affairs Minister S Jaishankar on the sidelines of the just concluded G7 leaders Summit. "I had a great discussion with Jaishankar on the sidelines of G7 in Hiroshima. We look forward to hosting Mr Modi in June. PM Modi's visit will celebrate the deep partnership between the US and India," said Blinken.

Jaishankar said it was good to meet Secretary Blinken and he was looking forward to meeting him again in June during the Prime Minister's visit.

The PM will reach the US on June 21, which also happens to be the International Yoga day. In New York, he is likely to perform yoga along with participation from UN and emphasise on yoga as a unifier in the world. A day later on June 22, the Prime Minister will head to Washington DC for a state visit and attend a dinner hosted by President Biden.

The PM is also expected to go to Chicago where he will meet the Indian diaspora. "You have made a fundamental shift in climate issues, you have influence in Indo-Pacific, and you are making a difference," US President Biden told PM Modi on the sidelines of meetings in Hiroshima.

PM Modi and President Biden, despite having differing views on the conflict in Ukraine, have continued their association with civility.

Meanwhile, trade between the two nations is a major unifier. The US has emerged as India's biggest trading partner in 2022-23 on account of increasing economic ties between the two countries.

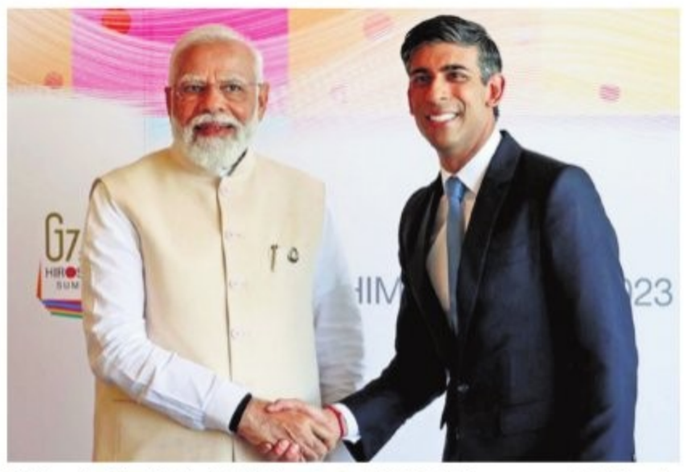
According to the provisional data of the Commerce Ministry, the bilateral trade between India and the US has increased by 7.65 per cent.

PM asks why UN fails to prevent conflicts, highlights need for reform

YESHI SELI @ New Delhi

PRIME Minister Narendra Modi in his address in a session on the sidelines of the G7 Summit in Hiroshima raised the question of why the United Nations (UN) has not been able to establish peace.

"The United Nations was established with the very purpose of establishing peace. Why does it often fail to prevent conflicts today? Why, even the definition of terrorism has not been accepted in the UN yet? If introspection is done, then one thing is clear. The institutions created in the last century are not in line with the system of the twenty-first century. They do not reflect the realities of the present. That is why it is necessary that reforms should be given concrete shape in big institutions like UN .It will also have to become the voice of the Global South. Otherwise we will just keep talking about ending conflict. UN and Security Council will become just a talk shop," said the PM.



PM Narendra Modi held a 'fruitful meeting' with his British counterpart Rishi Sunak on the sidelines of the G7 Summit in Hiroshima The two leaders agreed to deepen bilateral cooperation on a wide range of issues, including trade and investment | PTI

He also spoke about his interaction with Ukrainian President Volodomyr Zelenskyy. "I do not consider the current situation as an issue of politics or economy. I believe that this is a matter of humanity, a matter of human values. From the very beginning, we have maintained that dialogue and diplomacy is the only way. And we will make every possible effort to contribute, in whatever way India can, for resolving this situation," he said.

Global peace, stability and prosperity is the world's common objective.

Winning Strategy

NAVEEN MAY GO FOR EARLY STATE POLLS IN ODISHA

Odisha chief minister Naveen Patnaik is likely to dissolve the state assembly and seek a fresh mandate along with five other states scheduled for fresh elections in November this year. The term of the current assembly expires next May and elections are to be held along with the Lok Sabha polls. Sources said that Patnaik is keen on decoupling the two elections. He plans to dissolve the state assembly well in time for the elections to be held in December along with five other states namely Madhya Pradesh, Rajasthan, Chhattisgarh, Telangana and Mizoram. According to sources, Patnaik feels that simultaneous elections for the assembly and Lok Sabha might prove disadvantageous for his party. He feels the MLAs get engaged in their electioneering and find little time to mobilise voters for the party's Lok Sabha candidates. In the last assembly elections, Patnaik's party, Biju Janata Dal (BJD) won a landslide by bagging 112 out of the total 147 seats, while the main opposition party, BJP, could win only 23 seats. Congress came a distant third with nine seats. But in the 2019 Lok Sabha elections, which were held along with the assembly elections, the BJD could win only 13 out of 21 seats, while the BJP took away eight. Patnaik feels the focus of the party apparatus on winning state elections has hurt the chances in Lok Sabha polls. The BJD chief is not only keen on retaining power in the state but also plans to increase his tally in the Lok Sabha elections in 2024.

Media Outreach

PM TO RESTART OFF-RECORD MEETINGS WITH SCRIBES

Prime Minister Narendra Modi is likely to start meeting editors and bureau chiefs of media platforms in the run-up to the Lok Sabha elections. Sources said the Prime Minister's Office as well as the media department at the BJP's central headquarters are busy preparing a list of invitees for these interactions. The Prime Minister will meet the journalists in batches of eight to ten to discuss governance and politics. Sources said that, unlike similar interactions in his first term where he mostly answered questions, the Prime Minister plans to make this round more interactive. The Chatham House rule is followed in these interactions which allows the attendees to use the information received at the meetings without identifying who said what. Journalists who attended the previous round of interaction spoke about the Prime Minister's frank and detailed answers to all questions. They said the interactions helped them understand the Prime Minister's views on crucial issues. The discussions were freewheeling, with no bar on asking any questions. Sources said this time around the Prime Minister will also be asking questions. He would like to know about the effectiveness of his government's schemes and gaps in policy-making, if any, sources said. The interactions are likely to start next month and the journalists in the national capital have quite a repository of questions for the Prime Minister.

Delegates arrive in Srinagar for G20 meeting on tourism

YESHI SELI @ Srinagar

NEARLY a year-and-a-half of work and many meetings have made it possible for Srinagar to host a G20 meeting, which happens to be the biggest international event ever to be held in Kashmir. With over 60 delegates from 17 countries, this is the best participation in a tourism meet held under India's G20 presidency.

Eco-tourism and film tourism will be the two main dominant themes of the 20 meeting. Representatives of Dharma Produtions, Netflix and actors are expected to attend the event. "There has been step-by-step improvement in the way things have shaped out for this G20 meeting. A few times that I have been here I have noticed a lot has improved, roads have been spruced up and Srinagar is on its way to becoming a smart city," said G20 chief coordinator Harsh Vardhan Shringla, during a curtain raiser event held in the Sher-e-Kashmir International Convention Centre (SKICC) which is located on the banks of the picturesque Dal Lake.

Film tourism main theme

Eco-tourism and film tourism will be the two main dominant themes of the upcoming G20 meeting. Representatives of Dharma Produtions, Netflix and actors are expected to attend the event

Meanwhile, India has distanced itself from comments made by China on why Beijing didn't want to attend the G20 event in Kashmir.

New Delhi has focused its attention on the large numbers of delegates that have arrived at Srinagar. In fact, a planned excursion to Gulmurg for the delegates was called off because handling so many was becoming a challenge.

"Singapore has the largest delegation and there are participants from the US, UK, Russia and most G7 nations, besides guest countries like Bangladesh. For us what matters is the outreach and the numbers are unprecedented," said tourism secretary Arvind Singh in Srinagar.

The tourism sector is booming in the valley and the government is making projections of receiving 2 crore tourists during the current ongoing season and there seems to be a resurgence of foreign tourists back in the Valley.

Security has been beefed up, and advisories have been issued for residents to avoid using the boulevard road (which runs through where most delegates are staying and also the SKICC. Some schools and shopping areas too have been shut for the next three days.

Danish technology helps India produce fuel from stubble, says envoy

YESHI SELI @ New Delhi

UNDER the India-Denmark Green Strategic Partnership, India has benefitted from Danish technology which is sustainable, green and renewable. One project which is gaining ground and doing well is the use of agri waste as fuel to generate power. This agri-waste includes stubble that is burnt and chokes Delhi and its National Capital Region (NCR) every winter.

"There is a company in Punjab (SAEL) which has set up small power plants (in Punjab, Haryana, Rajasthan) that is using agri-waste to generate power. This includes stubble that is burnt every winter around Delhi. We have supported the company with our technology where the plant boiler is designed by us. The boiler is used for incineration of paddy waste, straw and through that waste generates electricity which is sent to the grid," says Ambassador of the Royal Danish Embassy, Freddy Svane.

Farmers are being incentivised to sell their waste (including stubble) for Rs 5,000 per acre. Besides, this would generate employment too. Sael (Sukhbir Agro Energy Limited) has its roots in rice milling, power plants, solvent oil and warehouse. The power plant projects have generated employment for nearly 1500 people by setting up these power plants which have a generating capacity of 15 to 16 mw. Besides, they reduce air pollution as they are environment friendly.

"When I was a young child in Denmark, we too had a problem of stubble burning and people were choked. And then we found a solution to the problem, which we are now sharing with India," Ambassador Svane said, adding that they were sharing tech that is proven.

'Baby food brand ads on social media violate law'

KAVITA BAJELI-DATT @ New Delhi

SEVERAL baby food brands are violating laws by using social media to advertise products like infant milk substitutes, according to the latest report released by the Breastfeeding Promotion Network of India (BPNI).

The report, which flags 15 top brands, was released on May 21, also World Breastfeeding Day. BPNI, which has been mandated by the government as a child welfare non-profit to flag such violations, said a new trend has emerged in promoting these products using social media, and unsuspecting influencers are becoming partners in crime. Moreover, some of these products are being promoted by celebrities like Bollywood actors Anushka Sharma and Mira Rajput Kapoor, wife of Shahid Kapoor.

"New tactics of involving celebrities, social media influencers, mothers and mother bloggers on Instagram and YouTube is certainly catching on," said the report adding that knowingly or unknowingly, they are also infringing the law and are liable to be penalised.

There is no system to monitor and investigate such violations, which have remained unchecked. The law prohibits any kind of "promotion" of food products or feeding bottles, including advertising, incentives or directly reaching out to moms, for children under the age of 24 months.

WHAT THE REPORT SAYS

Legal position

Law prohibits any kind of "promotion" of baby food products or feeding bottles, including advertising, incentives or directly reaching out to moms, for children under the age of 24 months.

Child welfare non-profit BPNI, which has been mandated by the government as organisation to flag such violations, says:

- New trend emerged in promoting these products using social media
- Some products are being promoted by celebrities like Bollywood actors
- No system to monitor and investigate such violations, which have remained unchecked

Social media is the new promotion playground. It must be monitored and notified diligently. Digital technologies used for marketing breast milk substitutes are proven to be contributing to increasing sales and consumption of baby formula across the world. Our findings confirm WHO observations

Breastfeeding Promotion Network

"Social media is the new-generation promotion playground; therefore, it must be monitored and notified diligently. Digital technologies used for marketing breast milk substitutes are proven to be contributing to increasing sales and consumption of baby formula across the world. Our findings confirm World Health Organisation's observations," said the report titled "Indian Law Baby Food Offenders."

The Indian government enacted the Infant Milk Substitutes Feeding Bottles, and Infant Foods (Regulation of Production, Supply and Distribution) Act 1992, and Amendment Act 2003 (IMS Act) in order to control the marketing of the baby foods as a follow-up to the International Code of Marketing of Breast Milk Substitutes and subsequent World Health Assembly resolutions.

Speaking to this paper, Arun Gupta, one of the four founder paediatricians of BPNI said, undermining breastfeeding and complementary feeding through commercial influence also violates child's right to life and health and mother's right to breastfeed. Non-stop promotion continues even after 32 years of the established law.

He said they have flagged these 15 violations of the IMS Act by major companies and the platforms used by them with the union health ministry. BPNI has also written a letter to Health Secretary Rajesh Bhushan and National Commission for Protection of Child Rights (NCPCR), chief Priyank Kanoongo flagging the violations.

Railways likely to miss August 15 deadline for 75 Vande Bharat trains

RAJESH KUMAR THAKUR @ New Delhi

IT seems unlikely that the Railways will be able to run 75 Vande Bharat trains by August 15 this year on different routes in the country. With only 3 months left now to meet the deadline, the Railways has been able to run only 17 Vande Bharat trains. According to experts, the Railways will have to expedite manufacturing and roll out at least three-four Vande Bharat trains every week to achieve the target of running 75 Vande Bharat trains by August 15.

According to a senior railway official, "It seems a bit difficult to run 75 Vande Bharat trains by August 15. To meet the target, the Railway will have to make sure rolling out at least 3-4 rakes of Vande Bharat trains every week. And the Railway is working on it."

When asked whether the Railways will be able to run 75 Vande Bharat trains by August 15, Sudhanshu Mani, who is said to be the creator of train-18 and former GM of Integrated Coach Factory Chennai, said, "I do not think so. In my view, good progress is already being made and it does not matter whether we make 75 or 25 by August 15. The spirit of proliferation has been well-adopted after a period of negativity for three years."

According to source in the Railway ministry, the pave on which the Vande Bharat trains are rolled out form the manufacturing units, including ICF, is not enough to meet the target of running 75 Vande Bharat trains by August 15 this year.

He said that it would be good even if the Railway succeeds running 30 Vande Bharat trains by August 15. " In the current scenario of track upgradation, work is not keeping pace with manufacturing of trains and extra pressure to make more trains unnecessarily presents the risk of quality going down as has been reported in some recent trains," Sudhanshu Mani told this newspaper.

He said that measures like running eight-coach Vande Bharat trains are self-defeating as a valuable path in a section is wasted for an inadequately small train.

Union railway minister Ashwini Vaishnaw on a tour to Odisha to attend the flag off event of 17th Vande Bharat Express train from Puri to Howrah told the media that PM Narendra Modi has set a target that Vande Bharat should reach all states by June. In the, Budget, 2022, Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman announced that the government would manufacture 400 more Vande Bharat trains over next three years.

Cong ignored OBCs, says Shah

Addressing Modi community in Gujarat, he says only PM Modi has worked for their welfare

DILIP SINGH KSHATRIYA @ Ahmedabad

UNION Home Minister Amit Shah on Sunday charged that the Congress "oppressed and degraded" the Other Backward Classes when it was in power at the Centre and asserted that it was the BJP that gave the first OBC prime minister to the country Narendra Modi.

Shah was speaking at the national convention of the Modi community on Sunday in Ahmedabad.

Addressing a gathering at the Modi Samaj national convention in Ahmedabad, Shah said, "Congress has always neglected the OBC community. It is the BJP that is working for them. Congress ruled the country for 56 years but did not develop them (OBC community), but PM Modi has worked for them in the last nine years. The PM comes from a poor family so he understands the pain of the poor."

"In the BJP administration, the OBC community has been respected. The party gave the constitutional status to the OBC commission and for the first time, 27 ministers from the OBC community were represented in the Union cabinet," Shah added.

He referred to Rahul Gandhi's 2019 criminal defamation conviction for his 'Modi surname' remark.

"If someone insults a person, it is not a big deal, but if someone insults an entire community and the country's PM, then it is an insult to the entire country. Purneshbhai fought this battle and won it. I congratulate him and others for fighting a battle for the dignity of your community," said Shah.

Talking about PM Modi's work, Shah said: "As a young worker, Modi strengthened the organization by traveling from villages. It was on this basis that he became the CM. He is now the Prime Minister of the country and is aiming to raise the country's pride throughout the world."

He told the audience that for the first time, a person from a poor family has become the Prime Minister.

He listed the welfare works done under the PM's stewardship.

"Modi provided free gas cylinders to about 13 crore people, toilets to 10 crore people, housing to 3 crore people, and health care facilities for the people. Besides, for 2.5 years, the PM has arranged 5kg food grain delivery to 80 crore people," said Shah.

He said the country should be proud that the Prime Minister belongs to the Modi community.

"It is a matter of great happiness and pride for every Indian as even US President Joe Biden asked Modiji for his autograph, saying he is very popular in the US," Shah said.

The Home Minister offered prayers at the Parmeshwar temple and flagged off 320 new buses of Gujarat State Road Transport Corporation (GSRTC). He also inaugurated Amul's state-of-the-art biological testing laboratory in Ahmedabad.

Punjab recasts SIT probing drug case against Majithia

HARPREET BAJWA @ Chandigarh

THE Special Investigation Team (SIT) probing the drug case involving senior Shiromani Akali Dal (SAD) leader and former Punjab minister Bikram Singh Majithia has been reconstituted.

Majithia is the brother-in-law of SAD chief Sukhbir Singh Badal. In another development, the Punjab government has also shifted the investigation into the Pearl Group chit fund fraud case to the state vigilance bureau.

In the reconstituted SIT, MS Chhina, IGP (Patiala Range) will head the SIT in place of Rahul S, DIG Vigilance Bureau. The other members of the SIT will remain unchanged. Rahul S was reportedly facing flak for not submitting challans in the drugs cases.

Sources said since Rahul was posted in the Vigilance Bureau and was supervising a large number of corruption cases, his shifting was imminent. Besides, SIT needed an officer who is posted in the field to head it so that the investigation was more focused.

In December 2021, Majithia was booked under the NDPS Act for helping drug smugglers and remained in jail for a few months before being released on bail. However, the police investigation after the registration of the case did not make much progress.

Majithia has earlier claimed that he was innocent, saying the police had nothing against him, a reason why it could not submit the challan in the case. He also demanded cancellation of the case.

Meanwhile, the state government has also shifted the investigation into the Pearl Group chit fund fraud case to the state vigilance bureau.

Rare fish species found in Dal Lake

A rare fish species — 'Alligator Gar' fish — has been found in Dal Lake in Srinagar. The 'Alligator Gar fish' was found by J&K Kashmir Lake Conservation and Management Authority (JKLCMA) personnel during the cleaning of Dal Lake. It is for the first time that the fish, which has a crocodile-like head and razor-sharp teeth, has been found in Dal Lake. The videos of the rare fish, which is found in North America, went viral on social media. Authorities would be conducting studies to ascertain if there is presence of more exotic fish species in Dal Lake.

Smart cycling to be encouraged in Srinagar

In order to tackle overcrowding, reduce traffic mess and promote eco-friendly transport in the city, a smart cycling initiative (public bicycle sharing system) with the slogan "Burn Fat Not Fuel" would be launched by Ahmedabad-based company—'Chartered Bike' in Srinagar by the end of this month as part of a smart city project in Srinagar. The initiative, which is part of the smart city project, will cover the entire Srinagar city. According to Mehran Khan, Division Head for Chartered Bikes, Srinagar will have 100 cycling points.

Teachers warned on corporal punishment

To curb corporal punishment to students, the authorities have decided to rein in teachers by warning them that they may face stern disciplinary action including incarceration if found indulging in corporal punishment. The Chief Education Officer (CEO) Anantnag in a stern warning to teachers informed them that corporal punishment is banned in all educational institutions as enshrined in Right to Education Act 2009. The teachers have been asked to desist from corporal punishment to students and take other measures to discipline the students.

Days after ethnic violence in Manipur, CM allays fears of Kuki community

PRASANTA MAZUMDAR @ Guwahati

IN the backdrop of the ethnic violence in Manipur, Chief Minister N Biren Singh on Sunday said there was no fight between communities and there should not be any. Talking to journalists on the sidelines of an event in Imphal, he appealed to people to work towards restoring normalcy in the state.

"Past is past. Our mission now is to restore normalcy. There was no fight between communities and there should not be any. It (fight) is purely with the government. When any government anywhere tries to do something, there will always be acceptance or resistance," Singh said.

He did not elaborate, however, the violence is believed to have its genesis in the drives against alleged encroachment of forest land and poppy cultivation in the hills. "Blame the government (if there is anything). We will rectify. Please don't make it an issue between communities," the CM said.

Recently, all 10 Kuki legislators, including seven from the ruling BJP, had flagged the "separate administration" demand for the community.

Asked if the government will reach out to them, Singh said, "The Kuki MLAs are a part of our family. Manipur is unique. It is a small state but it has 34-35 recognised tribes, including Kukis. We are all brothers and sisters."

Meanwhile, the state decided to distribute pens, pencils, notebooks, uniforms and sports material to 4,747 school children displaced by the violence. They are among 26,000 people who are still lodged in 178 temporary relief camps. The state's education minister Th Basantakumar Singh said the government would ask teachers to volunteer for the children.

NARENDRA SETHI @ Dehradun

A tigress, which was found unconscious in the Pakhro range of Corbett National Park, died of starvation, according to the post-mortem report, which came late on Saturday night.

Dr Samir Sinha, Uttarakhand Chief Wildlife Warden told this newspaper, "A tigress was found in an unconscious state in the Pakhro range of Corbett. Considering her condition, she was rescued because she was very old and weak. But she could not be saved and died on the way to the rescue centre." The tigress was later buried.

Neeraj Sharma, Kalagarh Divisional Forest Officer (DFO) said, "Due to old age, the tigress could not walk much in search of prey and fainted due to hunger. She was first given first aid on the spot, but the tigress died on the way to Dhela Rescue Centre."

This is the fourth case of tiger death in recent times. Earlier, a tiger was shot dead by a forest guard.

Two others were found dead under suspicious circumstances. Even for these deaths, the forest department has not yet made the investigation public. It is also learnt that due to the felling of trees and construction of structures in Pakhro, all wildlife including Cheetal (spotted deer), population has dwindled, leading to a shortage of prey for tigers.

According to sources in the forest department, "There was a plan to form a special Corbett Tiger Protection Force about ten years ago for their conservation.

It is said that the expenditure on this force was also to be borne by the National Tiger Conservation Authority (NTCA). A lot of paperwork was done for the force but the plan has not been implemented yet.

Ukraine's President Volodymyr Zelenskyy speaks during a news conference following the G7 Leaders' Summit in Hiroshima, Japan on Sunday | AFP

Ukraine denies Bakhmut held by Russian forces

However, Wagner group insists on taking control of the city to the last centimetre

KYIV

UKRAINIAN President Volodymyr Zelenskyy said on Sunday that Bakhmut was "not occupied" by Moscow, while the head of Russia's Wagner mercenary group insisted his fighters had taken control of the eastern city "to the last centimetre."

Kyiv's military said it was hanging on to a small part of the city and said its troops were advancing on its flanks.

A day earlier, Wagner and Moscow's regular army claimed to have fully captured Bakhmut, with Russian President Vladimir Putin congratulating them on the alleged conquest.

But speaking at the G7 summit in Hiroshima, Zelenskyy denied Russia's claims. "Bakhmut is not occupied by Russia today," he said. "I cannot share with you the tactical views of our military. The most difficult thing would be if there was some tactical mistake in Bakhmut and our people were surrounded."

Sitting next to US President Joe Biden, Zelenskyy suggested it would be a pyrrhic victory for Moscow. "You have to understand there is nothing" in Bakhmut, he said on the sidelines of the summit in Japan.

Zelenskyy compared the "absolute total destruction" in Bakhmut to the devastation in Hiroshima when the US dropped an atomic bomb on the Japanese city in 1945. "There is absolutely nothing alive (there)."

The Ukrainian army on Sunday said it retained an "insignificant" part of the city and that soldiers were advancing in from the city's outer limits.

"We continue to advance on the flanks in the suburbs of Bakhmut," said Oleksandr Syrsky, the commander of Ukraine's ground forces.

But Yevgeny Prigozhin, the chief of Wagner whose fighters have spearheaded Russia's advance on Bakhmut, insisted that there were no Ukrainian troops there.

"There is not a single Ukrainian soldier in Bakhmut as we have stopped taking prisoners," Wagner chief Yevgeny Prigozhin said in a post on Telegram. "There are a huge number of corpses of Ukrainian soldiers."

Prigozhin said Zelenskyy was either not telling the truth or "like many of our own military leaders, simply does not know what is happening on the ground."

Trial process against May 9 strikers under military laws: Pak Army chief

ISLAMABAD

BRUSHING aside the concerns of human rights groups, Pakistan Army chief General Asim Munir has said that authorities have initiated a 'legal process of trial' under stringent military laws against those involved in recent attacks on military installations following the arrest of former PM Imran Khan.

Gen Munir made the disclosure on Saturday during his visit to Lahore.

According to a late-night statement by the Army, Gen Munir chief addressed the garrison officers and soldiers at the Corps Headquarters.

He said that the "legal process of trial against planners, instigators, abettors and perpetrators involved in the May 9 tragedy has commenced under the Pakistan Army Act and the Official Secret Act as per existing and established legal procedures derived from the Constitution of Pakistan."

Asim Munir visits Jinnah House

On Sunday, General Munir also visited Jinnah House and other army installations attacked and vandalised by politically motivated rioters. He was also briefed on the events of May 9.

On May 9, violent protests erupted after the arrest of Khan by paramilitary Rangers from the premises of the Islamabad High Court.

His party workers vandalised a dozen military installations, including the Jinnah House (Lahore Corps Commander house), Mianwali airbase and the ISI building in Faisalabad. The Army headquarters (GHQ) in Rawalpindi was also attacked by the mob for the first time.

Police put the death toll in violent clashes to 10 while Khan's party claims 40 of its workers lost their lives.

Meanwhile, Defence Minister Khawaja Asif said on Sunday that no new military courts were being established for trial of attackers on military installations.

Asif said that such courts had been functional for the last 75 years. "No new military courts are being established. Law is already present at this time. Courts are present and they have been working for the past 75 years," he said.

He also rejected the impression that the government was trying to snatch away the basic rights of people and said that cases would be pursued against individuals whose "footage, faces and identity is present that they are attacking military installations." PTI

Rescuers attend an injured man lying on the pitch following a stampede during a football match between Alianza and FAS at Cuscatlan stadium in San Salvador | AFP

OVER 500 INJURED, UNDER TREATMENT

Carlos Fuentes, spokesman for the emergency services group Comandos de Salvamento, said they were treating more than 500 people. About 100 people in serious condition were taken to hospital.

El Salvador soccer stadium stampede kills 12 people

SAN SALVADOR

TWELVE people were killed and hundreds injured on Saturday in a stampede at an El Salvador soccer stadium, police and emergency services said.

Authorities said initial reports pointed to a crush of fans who tried to enter Cuscatlan Stadium in the Central American country's capital San Salvador to watch a local tournament match between teams Alianza and FAS.

The match was suspended as emergency personnel evacuated people from the stadium, where hundreds of police officers and soldiers gathered as ambulance sirens wailed.

"Salvadoran soccer is in mourning," National Civil Police (PNC) director Mauricio Arriaza told reporters as he confirmed the death toll of 12.

In a statement on Sunday, FIFA president Gianni Infantino offered his condolences to the families and friends of the victims, calling the stampede "tragic."

Among the survivors, Sandra Guzman, 40, left a capital hospital early Sunday with a bandage on her left knee, walking with difficulty alongside her friend, Javier Ramirez, 31.

Health Minister Francisco Alabi said earlier that the country's hospital network was "providing medical care to all patients."

The stampede apparently started after a stadium gate fell, causing people to crowd together, he said.

At least two of the injured were in critical condition, according to police.

El Salvador's President Nayib Bukele said the PNC and the Attorney General's Office would investigate the incident and those responsible would be punished.

"Everyone will be investigated: teams, managers, stadium, box office, league, federation," Bukele said on Twitter.

He warned that "whoever the culprits are, they will not go unpunished." AFP

Israel's National Security Minister Itamar Ben-Gvir (L) walking through Jerusalem's Al-Aqsa mosque | AFP

Israeli minister visits sensitive religious site

JERUSALEM

ISRAEL'S National Security Minister Itamar Ben-Gvir visited the flashpoint Al-Aqsa mosque compound on Sunday, a controversial move by the extreme-right politician amid heightened tensions in annexed east Jerusalem.

The move came three days after Ben-Gvir and tens of thousands of Jewish nationalists marched through the Old City and just over a week into a fragile Gaza ceasefire. "Jerusalem is our soul," Ben-Gvir wrote on Telegram, alongside a photo of himself at the site in the heart of the Old City. "The threats of Hamas will not deter us, I went up to the Temple Mount!" he wrote, using the Jewish name for the site.

Hamas, the militant group that rules the blockaded Gaza Strip, slammed Ben-Gvir's action on Sunday. Israel will "bear responsibility for the barbaric incursions of its ministers and herds of settlers," the group wrote on Telegram.

The move "confirms the depths of danger looming over Al-Aqsa, under this Zionist fascist government and arrogance of its ministers from the extreme right," said Hamas. AFP

GOP DEBT CEILING DEMANDS UNACCEPTABLE, SAYS JOE BIDEN

WASHINGTON

PRESIDENT Joe Biden on Sunday dismissed Republican demands in negotiations to resolve US debt ceiling crisis but said a solution can be found.

Speaking at a press conference, Biden said Republicans' latest demands for spending cuts as a condition for raising the US government borrowing authority were "frankly unacceptable." "It's time for the other side to move from their extreme positions," he said. Biden said he would talk directly with Republican House Speaker Kevin McCarthy during his Air Force One flight on Sunday and said "we can reach an agreement." However, he cautioned that he could not "guarantee that they wouldn't force a default by doing something outrageous." Biden said that he was looking into an obscure constitutional clause in the 14th Amendment, which states that the validity of public debt "shall not be questioned"—and potentially authorising the president to circumvent Congress and raise the debt ceiling himself.

"I think we have the authority. The question is could it be done and invoked in time," he said, noting the likelihood of legal challenges to this and the rapidly approaching debt deadline.

The Treasury Department says that the government could run out of money and default on its $31 trillion debt as early as June 1 if Congress, where Republicans control the House of Representatives, does not authorise more borrowing.

No need to submit forms, Aadhaar to exchange ₹2000 notes

Country's largest lender SBI has said that the facility of exchange of ₹2,000 notes by public will be allowed without obtaining any requisition slip

SACHIN KUMAR @Mumbai

CLEARING the doubts and rumours surrounding ₹2,000 notes, banks have clarified that customers would neither have to fill out any forms nor provide identity proof such as Aadhaar card to exchange or deposit these notes, which are set to become a thing of the past.

Country's largest bank State Bank of India (SBI) has asked its officials not to ask for any form or slip to exchange these notes. In an internal circular to chief general manager of all its local head offices, SBI has said that the facility of exchange of ₹2,000 notes by public will be allowed without obtaining any requisition slip.

"It has been decided that the facility of exchange of ₹2000 denomination Bank Notes to all members of the public up to a limit of ₹20,000 at a time will be allowed without obtaining any requisition slip as per the format attached in Annexure- III," a circular from the state lender said.

Social media was abuzz with unconfirmed reports stating that customers would be required to fill a form and provide identity proof to exchange or deposit ₹2000 notes.

Also, SBI has clarified that people will not be required to submit identification at the time of exchange. "Further no identity proof is required to be submitted by the tenderer at the time of exchange," noted the circular.

The Reserve Bank of India (RBI) on Friday announced withdrawal of ₹2000 currency notes from circulation but gave public time till September 30 to either deposit such notes in accounts or exchange them at banks.

Officials of private sector banks have also said the customers would not have to fill any form or give an Aadhaar card to exchange these notes. However, they added that more details and clarifications are expected in the coming days.

"So far, we have not received any communication from our head office regarding exchange of ₹2,000 notes. We have not been told to ask for any identity proof from customers coming to deposit or exchange ₹2000 notes. Also, there is no form to be filled by customers to exchange these notes as of now. We have not received any such format for that form or slip," a branch manager of a private sector bank told this newspaper. "We expect to get more clarity on this issue on Monday. We are expecting to witness a huge rush of customers this week," he added.

For bankers, this announcement by the RBI has revived the memories of demonetisation announced in November 2016 when branches were flooded with customers coming to deposit their notes.

While banks are getting ready for the upcoming rush of customers, they will not accept ₹2000 notes on Monday.

They have advised customers not to visit the branch to exchange or deposit these notes on Monday. "We will not accept any ₹2,000 note on Monday and will start exchanging or depositing these notes from May 23. We have already witnessed a surge in queries from customers on Saturday regarding this issue, but we have nothing concrete to tell them," said a senior official of a public sector bank.

"As of now, customers do not need to fill any forms or provide identity proof to exchange ₹2000 notes," he clarified.

There is also confusion about the status of these notes after September 30. As per the central bank, these notes will continue to remain legal tender even after September 30 meaning they can be used for transactions.

Customers can deposit ₹2000 banknotes into their bank accounts or exchange them for banknotes of other denominations at any bank branch.

In order to ensure smooth operations and to avoid disruption of regular activities of bank branches, exchange of ₹2000 banknotes into banknotes of other denominations can be made up to a limit of ₹20,000.

The move comes amid concerns of the highest denomination notes being used to hoard black money.

The RBI had stopped printing ₹2000 notes in 2018-19 and the notes were rarely in circulation.

The ₹2000 denomination bank note was introduced in November 2016, primarily to meet the currency requirement of the economy in an expeditious manner after the withdrawal of legal tender status of all ₹500 and ₹1,000 bank notes in circulation at that time.

As per the RBI, about 89% of the ₹2,000 denomination banknotes were issued prior to March 2017 and are at the end of their estimated life span of 4-5 years.

The total value of such banknotes in circulation has declined from ₹6.73 lakh crore at its peak as on March 31, 2018 (37.3% of notes in circulation) to ₹3.62 lakh crore constituting only 10.8% of notes in circulation as on March 31, 2023.

MONEY MATTERS

WHY MUTUAL FUNDS MATTER TO YOUR FINANCIAL WELL-BEING

FINANCIAL KNOWLEDGE

THE Securities and Exchange Board of India has put out a consultation paper on the total expense ratio (TER) charged by the asset management companies (AMCs) to you. Presently, AMCs managing your money through equity, debt and other mutual funds schemes charge you additional expenses over the TER. The Sebi paper seeks to bring all expenses under a uniform TER. It is essential that the TER lives up to the name, and you are not charged anything more than that. Anything that simplifies your life as a mutual fund investor should be welcomed. Mutual funds are supposed to help you achieve your financial goals. Despite covering considerable ground, the industry has a long way to go.

About 3.77 crore unique investors use mutual funds as a vehicle now. That is a significant jump from 1.28 crore unique investors in March 2017. However, considering the population of India, it is still barely a 3% penetration. It is much easier now to invest through mutual funds than before. Sebi's moves are likely to ease the path further. It is unclear if unitholders bother about the expense ratio as long as the fund's performance is better than the benchmark.

Even then, the low penetration means individual households have to see mutual funds as the vehicle for financial security to own a variety of asset classes. Investor awareness assumes significance. Sebi is allowing mutual funds to expense the cost of distribution commission for inflows from B-30 cities to the investor awareness budget. These are cities beyond the Top 30 cities in India. That allows the mutual fund industry to initiate new people in the mutual funds' sector.

The regulators would do whatever it takes to create awareness and make mutual funds interesting. There is a problem with the upfront disclaimers that 'mutual funds are subject to market risks'. While it is essential for everyone to understand the risk associated with investing, the disclaimer by the mutual fund industry effectively scares people. You need more people to come to the fold. The industry has requested toning down or removing it for a long time. Sebi and regulators want the disclaimer put upfront as a matter of caution. The disagreement over this matter needs a swift resolution.

There is also a significant misconception. Most people equate mutual funds to equity markets. You must understand that mutual funds are not an asset class in themselves. They are a vehicle that allows you to own a variety of asset classes. Those could be equity, debt or gold. You must work with your professional financial advisor to create an investment portfolio that suits your risk profile. An appropriate asset allocation plan matters to you more than anything else.

You need exposure to India's equity or debt markets. There can be no better way to invest in these asset classes if you are new to the investing world. India's economy is expected to grow steadily over the next several years. Besides Sebi's initiatives, the digital revolution in India is also an enabler. In a recent speech, the Reserve Bank of India deputy governor Michael D Patra explained the 'Dawn of India's age'. He highlighted that India has emerged as the most significant player in real-time payment transactions globally, with a 50% share. He said that the Unified Payment Interface is at the heart of the ecosystem and has witnessed around 9 billion transactions in April 2023 alone. The India stack also brings mutual funds and the stock markets closer to you.

It is very common for Indian households to own real estate and gold. However, financial assets are only limited to bank deposits and life insurance. It is time for you to look at financial markets and make a beginning through mutual funds. If you think choosing a mutual fund scheme is a complex task, you can look at exchange-traded funds. They track popular benchmark indices and are supposed to track the performance of these indices. With all these developments, there is little excuse for not investing.

RETIREMENT PLANNING: HOW MUCH CORPUS DO YOU REQUIRE?

FINANCIAL ADVICE

PV SUBRAMANYAM

writes at www.subramoney.com and has authored the best seller 'Retire Rich - Invest ₹40 a day'

I just saw a survey in an American poll that only 20% of the people surveyed think that they can ever retire! Is that not appalling? I mean imagine being told in your 30s or 40s that you will never be able to retire because of your income and expense levels.

Then I began wondering whether the 80% were sure or were they just lacking in confidence? What about the 20% of the respondents? Were they over-confident or just sure?

So I asked a few friends. The answers were on the predicted lines. They had no clue!! Imagine at the age of 44 you have no clue about your retirement. In this cruel world, her retirement could be 6 years away, and she had no clue! In many companies when the management changes hands – could even be from father to son or elder brother to a younger one – they do try to reduce the head count.

There is just one way to have anything better than a (wild) guess about what your financial future may look like. Plain and simple, do your math and look at your financial numbers.

No, you do not need to be a math or physics professor at IIT to do this nor do you need a financial advisor to do this for you! There are enough calculators around the world for you to do this.

You just need some patience and the ability to be honest with yourself. If you do not have that, see if your spouse has it. If both of you lack then go to a financial planner who understands all this jargon!

Step one is to find out how much you are currently spending! This is easy. Take your bank passbook and your credit card statement – it shows all your cheque based expenses. See how much cash you withdraw on a monthly basis. Totalling up these numbers tells you how much you spend on a monthly basis. Now add up the annual expenses – like festivities, weddings, etc. That my friend is what you spend. Easy is it not?

Your retirement spending might be lower (if you had paid off all your loans and your kids had gone away) or it might be higher (more travel and medical costs?). Make adjustments and don't expect to arrive at the perfect number. You have an approximate number. This is surely not a bad start. Most people don't know what their numbers are and have never thought about it. You have at least made a start!

Remember to adjust this for inflation

So if you are 40 years of age and you are spending ₹55,000 per month including ₹10,000 for your kid, it means your expenses are ₹40,000 per month. This adds up to ₹480,000 per annum. Add ₹ 120,000 for expenses like vacation, festivals, gifts, etc. That makes it ₹6 lakh p.a. Assuming an inflation of 10%, it means your expenses will double every 7 years. So your expenses will be ₹3 lakh per month when you retire at the age of 60.

₹3 lakh per month means you need about 360*3 lakh = about ₹10.8 crore – which is the corpus that you require for retirement? If you do not like it, please don't kill me. Change the amount that you are spending!

Government has no plans to raise funds via green bonds in FY24

MONIKA YADAV @New Delhi

THE government has no plans to raise funds through issuance of sovereign green bonds in the current financial year, a finance ministry official told TNIE. The official on the condition of anonymity said that there is no need for raising funds through green bonds as of now.

The government raised ₹ 16,000 crore in two tranches of ₹8,000 each through issuance of sovereign green bonds for the first time in 2022-23. However, while announcing the borrowing calendar for the first half of the current financial year, it did not have the option of raising funds through green bonds. The government had then said that the issuance of sovereign green bonds would be announced in the second half of 2023-24.

Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman had announced in the Union Budget about the issue of green bonds as part of the government's overall market borrowings for mobilizing resources for green infrastructure. Green bonds proceeds are meant to be deployed in public sector projects which help in reducing the carbon intensity of the economy.

Meanwhile, the official said that the government would meet its fiscal deficit target for the current fiscal year because of lower crude oil prices and buoyant tax collection. He is also optimistic about the retail inflation remaining below 5% in the current financial year.

"We will be able to meet the fiscal deficit target for the current financial year on account of lower oil prices and growth in tax revenue both direct and indirect taxes," the official said. The government has set a disinvestment target of ₹51,000 crore for FY 24, which is the lowest target in seven years. The Reserve Bank of India (RBI) has decided to transfer over ₹87,000 crore surplus to the Central government exchequer. This will also boost the Centre's confidence of meeting its fiscal deficit target. The government has set a fiscal deficit target at 5.9% of the GDP for FY 24. It has committed to bring it down to 4.5% of the GDP. The retail inflation in April fell to an 18-month low at 4.7% owing to decline in food prices. Global crude oil prices have also been decreasing over the last few months. According to the official, crude oil prices will remain low on account of US recession fears.

India imported more than 87% of its domestic consumption in FY23. The Centre has projected the total gross market borrowing at ₹15.43 lakh crore for FY24. Sitharaman had said that the government would borrow ₹15.45 lakh crore with a net market borrowing of ₹11.8 lakh crore from small savings and other sources.

Will changes in Angel tax rules help start-ups?

UMA KANNAN @Bengaluru

EVER since the budget included non-resident investors under the ambit of angel tax, start-ups and the investment community have been raising concerns. But in March, the finance ministry said all concerns raised by stakeholders in the implementation of the proposal would be addressed, and on Friday, based on the inputs of stakeholders, in a notification, the Central Board of Direct Taxes (CBDT) exempted many foreign and Indian entities from the purview of angel tax.

Angel tax was introduced in 2012, and it is the tax that unlisted companies are liable to pay (about 30.9%) on the capital they raise through issue of shares, and it is calculated on the basis of the premium amount received above the fair market value of the shares.

CBDT has proposed that certain classes of persons being non-resident investors to whom clause (viib) of sub-section (2) of section 56 of the Act (angel tax) shall not be applicable, and this includes central banks, sovereign wealth funds, international or multilateral organisations or agencies including entities controlled by the Government or where direct or indirect ownership of the Government is 75% or more. Start-ups and investors have welcomed this draft rules.

"The exclusions proposed for certain non-resident investors, including sovereign wealth funds and regulated entities, is a positive move that recognises the integrity of these organisations and should bring increased funding stability. This will also boost the start-up ecosystem and encourage entrepreneurial spirit," said Mayank Singh, Co- founder of Campus 365.

To account for forex fluctuations, bidding processes and variations in other economic indicators, which may affect the valuation of the unquoted equity shares during multiple rounds of investment, it is proposed to provide a safe harbour of 10 % variation in value, CBDT said.

The inclusion of safe harbour of 10% will allow some flexibility to the promoters to negotiate for a better price. Along with safe harbour tolerance of price variation, the exclusion of Government controlled funds, SEBI registered entities is also an added exception from these new rules, said Saurrav Sood- Practice Leader- International Tax & Transfer Pricing at SW India.

New draft rules also introduce five new methods of valuation that will provide relief to non-resident investors.

Rahul Charkha, Partner, Economic Laws Practice said, "Presently, exemption from angel tax provisions is applicable where the consideration for issue of shares is received by start-ups registered with DPIIT or a venture capital undertaking from a venture capital company or a venture capital fund or a specified fund."

He also added that usage of some hybrid instruments, flipping of holding structures to obtain funding at overseas levels, instruments with differential rights garnering differential valuation are some of the prevailing practices that the companies are resorting to for raising funds from the overseas investors.

10% safe harbour

To account for forex fluctuations, bidding processes and variations in other economic indicators, which may affect the valuation of the unquoted equity shares during multiple rounds of investment, CBDT has proposed to provide a safe harbour of 10 % variation in value.

MUMBAI Indians are Indian Premier League royalty. Five-time champions, perennial contenders, an excel sheet cricket club who have married the art of off-field data with on-field execution. They also lose a lot of games in the first phase of the campaign before course correcting in the latter part of the season.

Sometimes, it works out. In 2015, they began the season by losing four in a row. They finished the league phase by winning seven off the last eight. Including the qualifier and the final, they won nine of the last 10 — an incredible streak considering T20 is a high variance sport even at the very elite level — to lift their second IPL title.

Sometimes, it doesn't work out. In 2018, they lost five of their opening six games before stringing together five wins in seven games. Any win off their last league game against Delhi Daredevils would have confirmed qualification. But they fell short.

BRIEF SCORES
SRH 200/5 in 20 ovs (Agarwal 83, Vivrant 69; Madhwal 4/37) lost to MI 201/2 in 18 ovs (Green 100 n.o, Rohit 56).

On a sunbathed Wankhede Stadium, they were not in a dissimilar position. They had to beat Hyderabad to give themselves a chance, any chance, of being in the mix. If nothing else, a win would put pressure on Bangalore — if weather permitted in the Garden City later in the day — in the league's last game against Gujarat.

Just like the majority of the last month, they did what was asked of them with minimum fuss. Riding on a four-fer from the uncapped Akash Madhwal and an inspired 100 from Cameron Green, they beat Hyderabad by eight wickets to leapfrog Bangalore into fourth place. It was their fifth win in their last seven league games; it was the sort of display one has come to expect from the franchise when the chips are down.

After 69 matches, it finally came down to the last league match to decide the fourth team in the playoffs. Bangalore would have liked Hyderabad's positive start with the bat not least because there was all sorts of electrical activity in the Bangalore skies. The heavens had opened as early as Saturday with weather reports suggesting a shortened match.

Once the electrical activity stopped and the overhead conditions cleared, Virat Kohli, whose evolution as a T20 batter continues, assumed centrestage to give Bangalore a prayer.

Asked to bat first by Hardik Pandya, Bangalore, as they have so often done this season, came out focusing on clearing the infield in the first six overs. While Kohli looked to hit the ball too hard, Du Plessis was on the money. A lot of Gujarat success has been down to Mohammed Shami picking powerplay wickets. Deny him that and the side can lose its oxygen. That's what happened as Du Plessis climbed into him, muscling him for four fours across five drama-filled balls in the third over. It wasn't pretty but who wants pretty when there's a match to be won.

That was the wake-up call Kohli (he was on eight of 10 at this stage) needed. The left-arm pace of Yash Dayal was despatched thrice on the leg-side for three fours.

When Kohli hits Rashid Khan for a boundary off his first ball, you know he's in the mood, alright. That was one of the features of his innings as he brought up back-to-back 100s in the league. Even as wickets fell at regular intervals, Kohli didn't allow himself to be stuck when the spinners were in operation.

Here's a small sample as to how he paced his innings. Against the pacers in the first 15 overs, he scored 33 off 22. Off the spinners, it was an equally impressive 30 off 21. But he didn't need to take undue chances as Michael Bracewell provided the ballast, a 26 off 16 just when it seemed like the innings needed that spark.

What has worked so well for Kohli over the years even in this format — something that had seemingly deserted him for sometime — was his ability to maneuver pace in the end. Under the Chinnaswamy lights on Sunday night, that old magic was visible as he scored 34 off 14 in the end overs.

Was it going to be enough? Kohli's innings made that question possible. However, Shubman Gill, the man many think will ultimately replace Kohli as India's next white ball great, played an innings based on authority and impudence. While they never allowed the asking rate to go out of hand, Bangalore were in with a sniff before Gill's swagger reduced the sniff to sniffles. And thanks to him, Mumbai, sitting a 1000 kms away, will take their place in the eliminator against Lucknow on Wednesday.

BRIEF SCORES: RCB 197/5 in 20 ovs (Kohli 101 n.o; Ahmad 2/39) lost to GT 198/4 in 19.1 ovs (Gill 104 n.o, Vijay 53; Siraj 2/32).

Bronze for Shaili in 1st sr int'l meet

INDRANEEL DAS @ Chennai

COMPETING in a first major senior international competition, like the Golden Grand Prix, can be tricky. India's up-and-coming young long jump athlete, Shaili Singh, also had some flutter during the Seiko Golden Grand Prix — part of the World Athletics Continental Tour — but was strong enough to win bronze with a jump of 6.65m in her first attempt. In the next series of jumps, she tried to improve but could not get close to her personal best of 6.76m she had managed at the Indian GP in April this year.

Yet Shaili, the junior world championships silver medallist, was pleased with her performance because it has come in her first Grand Prix and against some good competitors who had better personal bests than her. The women's long jump was won by Germany's Maryse Luzolo with a distance of 6.79m and Brooke Buschkuehl was second with 6.77m. Shaili's is the best by an Asian this season and would try to improve as she heads to Asian Championships and hopefully a couple of Grand Prix in Europe.

Shaili's coach Robert Bobby George sounded relieved after the event. On Saturday, he did say that 6.65m is what he was expecting and she could do more. "Considering it's her first Grand Prix, this result is very heartening," said Robert from Yokohama. "She did very well in her first two jumps but I think she got a bit tired after that. Conditions were good. Later, there was a slight head wind also. Anyway, we will have to assess her performance and improve."

Shaili, who trains at the Anju Bobby George Jumps Academy in Bengaluru and funded by TOPS, has had a good season so far but she is yet to qualify for the Worlds in Budapest in August. Robert felt they needed some good jumps so that they could improve their ranking on the Race to Budapest list.

"We will compete at the inter-state nationals in Bhubaneswar next month and then at the Asian Championships where we can get some important points," he said. "We will try for two-three Grand Prix in Europe also." As of now, Robert said they are happy that her jump is among the best by Asians in 2023. "This is a good experience for her," he said. "She has competed against top Japanese jumpers who will be our competitors at the Asian Championships and Games later. I told her let's beat the Japanese athlete at their home. We need to improve on her endurance a bit more."

China claim record 13th Sudirman Cup title

AGENCIES @ Suzhou

CHINA claimed a record 13th Sudirman Cup title on Sunday, defeating South Korea on home soil at the first major sporting event in the country since the lifting of pandemic restrictions. Cheered on by a raucous crowd brandishing red and white thundersticks and loud horns in the eastern city of Suzhou, China made short work of the Korean side, beating them 3-0.

Chen Yufei of China in action | AP

Chen Yufei defeated World No 2 An Se Young 21-16, 22-20 in the women's singles to seal victory, prompting the packed stadium to erupt in cheers and the entire Chinese team to rush onto the court to dance in a circle. The mixed team event is one of badminton's most important tournaments, and the stakes were higher than usual this year because performances will count towards qualification for the 2024 Paris Olympics.

"I am very happy to play at home," men's singles player Shi Yuqi said. "When you can feel that the audience is cheering you on, your own state will also be mobilised very well." Virtually all international sports events ground to a halt in China after the coronavirus pandemic emerged there in late 2019, with the notable exception of last year's Beijing Winter Olympics that were held in a virus-secure "bubble". China had come through a tricky semifinal against Japan, with the men's doubles pair of Liu Yuchen and Ou Xuanyi saving four match points before finally prevailing. "Watching the game yesterday gave me a stomach ache and a little dizziness, so I didn't sleep until after two o'clock," Shi said. South Korea beat Malaysia 3-1 on their way to the final. On Sunday, Zheng Siwei and Huang Yaqiong lost the opening game of the mixed doubles but pulled it back in a tense point-for-point second game to triumph 18-21, 22-20, 21-8.

A jubilant Zheng jumped up and down in excitement, ripped off his shirt and threw it into the crowd. His partner Huang threw her racket to a delighted spectator. Asked afterwards about how they were preparing for the Olympics, they said "let's just get the (qualification) points first".

South Korea's Lee Yun Gyu was easily outmatched in the men's singles, unable to deal with Shi's powerful smashes and laser focus.

Jayaprakash re-elected as president of SFI

GOMESH S @ Chennai

AS the Annual General body meeting of the Swimming Federation of India (SFI) was conducted in Chennai on Sunday, the federation's president RN Jayaprakash and general secretary Monal D Choksi were re-elected for their respective positions. While Sudesh Nagvenkar of Goa was elected as the treasurer, five vice presidents — Rajkumar, Anil Vyas, M Satish Kumar, Bhaskar Das and Anil Khatri — and three joint secretaries — TS Muraleedharan, M Lokeshwar Singh, Lakshmi Chandra Mahakur — too, were elected. Virendra Nanavati will act as the advisor to the president and also will look after the SFI administration.

Speaking after retaining the top position, Jayaprakash said that despite Covid-19 putting them on the backfoot in their first term, they are keen to build on the work done in the last four years.

The key focus areas, he said, are increasing the number of registered swimmers by 5000-10,000 each year with the help of camps and coaching clinics, special focus on water polo and diving targetting the youth and the swimmers at the state level, improving the number of competitive coaches.

RN Jayaprakash (C) addresses the media in Chennai on Sunday | SFI

Jayaprakash said that the SFI is going to propose to four states — Tamil Nadu, Delhi, Odisha, and Telangana — to hand over the swimming pools to the federation for a year-long camp so that they will be able to bring in foreign coaches. "In the Velachery swimming pool, we have a diving pool, a lovely gym, etc. If you have to build a pool like that level it will cost ₹1000 crore. If it is handed over to SFI along with SDAT, we both would combine together and do a very good academy there. We are going to propose it to four states," said Jayaprakash.

With the elite swimmers currently competing at the Mare Nostrum Swim Tour in Monaco, Choksi said that they have earmarked the upcoming events for them in the lead-up to the Paris Olympics.

City of Joy: Pep's men beat Chelsea to celebrate title triumph

AFP @ Manchester

MANCHESTER City celebrated their third consecutive Premier League title on Sunday as a much-changed side was still good enough to beat Chelsea 1-0 at the Etihad. Pep Guardiola's men clinched a fifth title in six seasons on Saturday when second-placed Arsenal were beaten 1-0 at Nottingham Forest.

That gave Guardiola the luxury of resting most of his star names with one eye on the FA Cup and Champions League finals next month as City go for the treble. The strength of City's squad was exemplified by Julian Alvarez, who has spent most of the season as Erling Haaland's understudy, scoring his 17th goal of the campaign to extend the English champions' unbeaten run in all competitions to 24 games.

7 Man City clinched a fifth PL title in six seasons on Saturday when second-placed Arsenal were beaten 1-0 at Nottingham Forest. They now have seven PL titles in total.

Results: Brighton 3-1 Southampton; Man City 1-0 Chelsea; West Ham 3-1 Leeds.

But a festive afternoon for City was marred at full-time as thousands of fans spilled onto the pitch despite pleas from the club to remain in the stands.

Guardiola made nine changes in all from the side that thrashed Real Madrid 4-0 in midweek. The youthful hosts were still too sharp for the beleaguered visitors early on and took the lead on 12 minutes. Alvarez continued his stunning season for club and country as the Argentine World Cup winner swept home Cole Palmer's pass. Palmer made the most of a rare Premier League start and was unlucky not to double City's lead when his goalbound effort was cleared off the line by Trevoh Chalobah.

Leeds in relegation peril

LONDON: Leeds slipped closer to relegation after a 3-1 defeat against West Ham in their penultimate game of the season.

Sam Allardyce's side blew the lead at the London Stadium as Rodrigo's opener was erased by goals from Declan Rice, Jarrod Bowen and Manuel Lanzini. Leeds remain third bottom and are two points adrift of fourth bottom Everton, with both teams having just one game left.

Elsewhere on Sunday, Brighton secured European football for the first time in their history with a 3-1 win against Southampton.

COMEDK IS AN EXAM FOR ADMISSION TO ENGINEERING COLLEGES IN KARNATAKA. BUT ITS APPEAL IS NO LESS THAN A CENTRAL EXAM. OFFICIALS TELL US HOW THIS CAME TO BE

MORE THAN 70%
COMEDK applicants are from outside Karnataka: Officials

SAUMYANGI YADAV

THE Consortium of Medical, Engineering and Dental Colleges of Karnataka (COMEDK) conducts entrance examinations for admission to many renowned engineering colleges of Karnataka. Following the increasing demand for engineering seats in Bengaluru among the aspirants, the entrance exam has become one of the most popular entrance exams after Joint Entrance Examination (JEE) Main.

This year, a combined examination for COMEDK Undergraduate Entrance Test (UGET) and Educational Rating and Assessment (ERA) foundation's Uni-Gauge will be conducted on Sunday, May 28 for 22,000 seats in 153 member institutions of COMEDK and 55 private, self-financed universities under the ERA foundation. The test will be conducted in online mode at 410 centres in over 180 towns and cities across India.

With the exam fast approaching, we reached out to Dr S Kumar, Executive Secretary of COMEDK and P Muralidhar, CEO of ERA Foundation for a discussion on the entrance examination, future trends in engineering admissions and the popularity of colleges in Karnataka among the aspirants.

The duo also commented on the subject of a prospective merger with the Karnataka Common Entrance Test (KCET) which was proposed last year, the future of state-specific entrance exams and the delay in the counselling process last year as well as advice for the students who will be appearing for the exam soon. Here are some excerpts from our conversation:

Q COMEDK, starting out as a state-specific exam has considerably expanded its reach to other states. What is the interest around COMEDK like when it comes to other states?
Dr S Kumar: COMEDK was started in the academic year 2004-05 and since the beginning, it has been a pan-India examination. We never restricted the exam to be available for Karnataka students alone.

This year, 71% of students who have registered for the examination are from other states while 29% are from Karnataka.

Q How has Karnataka positioned itself so that students from other states are attracted towards seeking admission in the state for higher education? What do you think are the main reasons behind this attraction?
Kumar: Most of the engineering colleges in Karnataka were established about 30-40 years ago. That is one of the strengths of Karnataka colleges. The state also provides a very convenient ecosystem for technical education. For example, when one has to opt for an internship during their course, most industry and IT giants are available here in Karnataka.

P Muralidhar: For every college or university, it takes a few years to establish itself and gain maturity. Karnataka started early on while other states were still catching up. So, obviously, due to this factor, colleges in this state have a better intake of students and the faculty is better too. That's why, 1,10,000 students are vying for 22,000 seats via COMEDK this year.

test ready

Q Recently, COMEDK introduced innovation hubs called COMED KARES. What are these centres and how does it help the students in your member institutions?
Kumar: It is a major initiative with an investment of nearly ₹25 crores that COMEDK has established eight innovation hubs called COMED KARES. These centres have all facilities for a modern-day engineering training ranging from artificial intelligence, machine learning, robotics to 3D printing and so on.

We want students to identify problems in the community, discuss solutions with the facilitators at our centres and kickstart the project. Out of the eight centres, four are in Bengaluru as it has 73 engineering colleges. All the training programmes are approved by Visvesvaraya Technological University and they have even assigned credit points for student participation.

Q What is your advice for the students who are going to appear for the COMEDK exam?
Kumar: There are no shortcuts while choosing and preparing for college admissions.

Muralidhar: COMEDK UGET is a moderate exam, unlike JEE Main or Advance where only 20% of the students get good seats. Anyone with a good hold on basic fundamentals can secure a COMEDK seat. There is nothing to worry about or any special preparation required. Consistency is the key that will help.

Q Focusing on the exam itself, are there any major changes when it comes to COMEDK UGET this year?
Kumar: During the pandemic, there were talks about how a few topics could not be covered in schools. In order to not handicap the students, during those two years, those chapters were deleted from the question bank. However, now, from this year, we have gone back to the regular syllabus.

Q How many engineering courses does COMEDK offer admissions to? There have been discussions about how IT courses are preferred a lot more over others. What are the other trends one can trace when it comes to engineering via COMEDK?
Muralidhar: The number and description of courses are different in different institutions, there are so many variations of the same courses. Surprisingly, the top five courses preferred by students are all computer-related courses, namely, Computer Science with Data Science, Computer Science Engineering (Internet of Things and Cybersecurity), Artificial Intelligence (AI) and Data Sciences, AI and Machine Learning, and Information Science and Engineering.

However, with the National Education Policy (NEP) 2020, one important trend that will be noted is the whole idea of interdisciplinary studies. So tomorrow, just because you're pursuing Mechanical Engineering does not mean you cannot pursue Computer Science. With that, Computer Science and Data Analysis will become a common thread across many branches.

Q Recently, there has been a push for bringing all entrance exams under one umbrella, especially under NEP. In such a situation, what do you have to say about state-specific exams like COMEDK and their future?
Muralidhar: Unlike medical courses, there are more engineering seats in India than the number of aspirants. So, looking at the situation, I do not think there is a need for one single exam for engineering courses or a merger.

COMEDK is the only central exam for colleges in Karnataka as there is a high demand for these colleges.

Q Last year, there were talks about Karnataka Common Entrance Test (KCET)-COMEDK merger. Though the talk was that it was turned down by COMEDK, do you think there is a scope for the same in the near future?
Kumar: No, I don't think there are any plans as such.

Muralidhar: The important point is that KCET is only for domicile students while COMEDK is pan-India, which is why there are two exams. Also, we are not competing at all. KCET and COMEDK conduct their admission process in a well-synchronised manner.

Q In 2022, the counselling process for COMEDK was delayed due to a delay in the KCET admission process. What can candidates expect this year? Would the two admission processes go hand-in-hand?
Muralidhar: Earlier, we were synchronising our counselling process so that a Karnataka student gets both choices.

On the other hand, now we do not need to do that since if the KCET process happens later and one of our candidates gets a government seat, we would be more than happy to return 100% of the money.

Q Any future plans for COMEDK, COMED KARES or member institutes?
Muralidhar: For COMED KARES, we have started these eight centres and we are already seeing reasonably good traction. But looking at the numbers, we have almost four lakh students just for engineering courses. So, from a capacity point of view, we are still falling short. This is why we are considering the expansion of this model within Karnataka.

Secondly, we might consider setting up extra research centres for dental and medical institutes.

Kumar: We are also contemplating a faculty training programme at all our centres so that the faculty can update themselves with modern technology. We have not structured a very detailed programme but we will do that shortly.

Karnataka: Hub for Technical Education in India? Here is what students, experts say

Experts say that the state has always been a pioneer in the field of engineering and technical education. But how accessible is this education to students coming from other states?

KARNATAKA is one of the most sought-after destinations among engineering aspirants due to several reasons. From being home to India's first engineer Sir M Visvesvaraya to housing the Silicon Valley of India, the state has had a long-standing history with technology.

Experts, colleges and students explained that the reason behind the high appeal for Karnataka's technological institutes includes high industry presence, established institutes, better placement and so on.

Experts explain the attraction

IT industry veteran TV Mohandas Pai, who is also the former Chief Financial Officer (CFO) of Infosys, explained, "The state has a long-established reputation of being a centre of technical education, an open welcoming culture, high-quality technical institutions and huge job availability. A long history of allowing private technical colleges, an enlightened open policy in higher education and huge job availability in tech in Bengaluru also gives the state an upper hand."

When asked about what Karnataka is doing to maintain its image in technical education, Pai added the private institutions in the state have very good placements and keep improving their standards while the state government has also started a programme of upgrading government institutions as per IIT standards.

Prof K Balaveera Reddy, former Vice-Chancellor of Visvesvaraya Technological University (VTU), Karnataka, said Karnataka has always been a pioneer in technical education. He added the state has a wide industry presence ranging from manufacturing to aeronautical, especially in Bengaluru.

state for tech

What do students prefer?

Industry experts and veterans have listed a number of reasons why students might prefer an engineering college in Karnataka over other states. But how accessible are Karnataka's engineering colleges to non-domicile students?

Students say that since Karnataka has been a tech hub for years, pursuing a technical degree in a place like this has its own obvious advantages.

"The difference in quality of education is also very evident. It can be seen by the fact that you'll find students from different parts of India in Karnataka colleges," said Tanmay Rajput, a native of Uttar Pradesh and a first-year engineering student studying in Bengaluru.

"Through COMEDK, we can get into RV College of Engineering or MS Ramaiah Institute in Bengaluru, which are comparable to premier institutes," said Prakhar Sachdev from Chattisgarh who will be appearing for COMEDK this year.

"In JEE Main, the competition is high and if you are not in the top 2% of the performers, you might not get the college of your choice. In COMEDK on the other hand, since there is no negative marking or reservation, one still has a chance to score well and get a good college," he added. Tanmay added Bengaluru is said to be a good city for students except for the high living costs.

Colleges, educators weigh in

The technical institutes in Karnataka say that there have always been a steady number of non-domicile students taking admission each year.

"In all the colleges, 30% seats are reserved for domicile students. Out of the rest, 40-45% are usually from other states.

Instead of coming to Bengaluru after graduation, the students want to study here and be part of this technical ecosystem," said Dr Sanjay Chitnis, Founding Dean, School of Computer Science and Engineering, RV University, Bengaluru.

Dr T Nageswara Rao, Director, School of Technology, GITAM Bengaluru, said that some of the courses are seeing a huge demand by students from other states.

"Particularly for CSE, there is a huge demand because of various job opportunities and high-paying job availability in the city," Rao explained.

"Colleges like MS Ramaiah attract top companies for campus placement. Karnataka colleges are well-known for maintaining quality in teaching and are application driven. This factor too attracts young minds from all over the country," explained Mahesh Yadav, South India region Head, Allen Career Institute.

DRIFTING PAST THE BLOCKS

Despite narrowly losing the FIA Rally Star Women's Final, this Bengaluru rally driver is continually working towards her goals no matter the constraints

TUNIR BISWAS

FOUR years into her career, rally driver Pragathi Gowda is inching closer and closer to her ultimate goal of rallying on the world stage. In the recently-concluded FIA Rally Star Women's final in Italy, Gowda represented India, came up short of first-placed Peru's Annia Cilloniz, and finished second. However, her driving wasn't inferior to the Peruvian.

"Timing-wise, Annia and I were equal. In fact, they wanted to give us a rerun. But she was better with the technical questions during the interview. As she was a mechanic herself, she had more knowledge on the matter. I knew the basics, but she knew in and out of the car. They wanted someone who was reliable and consistent as well as technically strong because once you get stuck in the middle of the rally, it's up to you how you come out. So in that way, it was really tough for me. But in terms of driving, I was up there," shares Gowda. As she stood second in the race, she earned a reserve role in the FIA Rally Star Training Season and the World Rally Championship (WRC), in case Cilloniz is unable to compete.

A loss due to the technical round and not for her driving skills, Gowda feels it was inevitable as India doesn't teach the other side of professional driving. "The problem here is we don't concentrate on technical terms at all. We just go drive and come back. So if we all focus a bit more on the technical terms as well as driving, it will be really good and consequently improve our driving skills as well. Once you know a few things like how a car handles itself and how to transfer weight, for example, it becomes very easy for you to drive," she explains.

Gowda believes that FIA Rally Star gave India (and to an extent the whole of Asia) an unforeseen opportunity to qualify for the WRC. Earlier, there never existed a selection process in the continent for the competition. "Racing in the WRC is a big dream for all of us, and the FIA Rally Star allowed us to shoot a shot at it. So, it was good exposure for us. Secondly, it's the crosskarts. It's the basics of rallying; if you do well in the crosskarts, you can jump into a rally car and perform well. It doesn't mean you're a professional, but it affirms that you know the basics. I hope the Federation of Motor Sports Clubs of India (FMSCI) considers this and gets crosskart championships to India. We'll see many more talents grow and more people coming forward to take part," says Gowda, who started driving at the age of 13.

As of now, Gowda is steadfastly training for the upcoming competitions. "Right now, my prime focus is the national rounds of the Rally of Arunachal, which is coming up next month. But I'm also simultaneously getting trained for the FIA Rally Star Training Season if Annia backs out for some reason. I have also realised that I need to work on my fitness more. It's not easy to drive 30 km in one stretch, especially in a heavy vehicle. So, physical abilities, mental focus and technical knowledge are all being strengthened," she says.

The problem in India is we don't concentrate on technical terms at all. If we all focus a bit more on that as well as driving, it will be really good and consequently improve our driving skills — Pragathi Gowda, rally driver

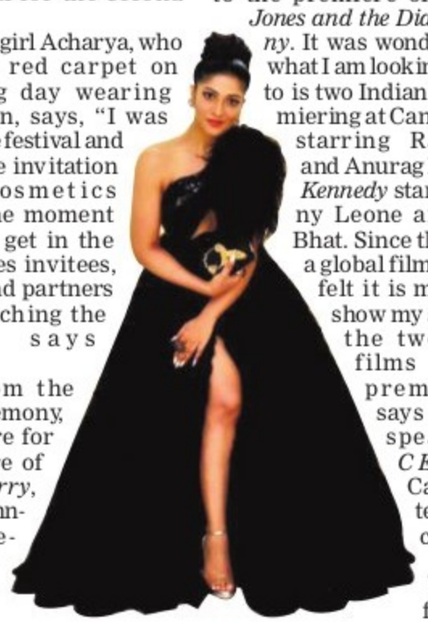
THE weather could be rainy and gloomy at Cannes but it didn't throw any bits of shade on Iti Acharya's excitement for walking the red carpet of the Cannes Film Festival for the second time.

Bengaluru girl Acharya, who walked the red carpet on the opening day wearing a black gown, says, "I was invited by the festival and soon I got the invitation from a cosmetics company. The moment our profiles get in the list of Cannes invitees, all their brand partners start approaching the guests," says Acharya.

Apart from the opening ceremony, she was there for the premiere of Jeanne du Barry, for which Johnny Depp reportedly got a seven minute standing ovation. "I also went to the premiere of Indiana Jones and the Dial of Destiny. It was wonderful. But what I am looking forward to is two Indian films premiering at Cannes, Agra starring Rahul Roy, and Anurag Kashyap's Kennedy starring Sunny Leone and Rahul Bhat. Since this is such a global film festival, I felt it is my duty to show my support to the two Indian films that are premiering," says Acharya, speaking to CE from Cannes, after taking a couple of minute breathers from her fittings.



Being in Cannes, where you are meeting all the global stars in flesh and blood, it is difficult to not get star-struck.

"During the inauguration of the Indian pavilion, I got to meet the Hollywood star, Michael Douglas. I have watched all his films. Never in my wildest dreams did I think I would meet him in real life! Not just Hollywood, during my red carpet walk, Sara Ali Khan and I were standing next to each other while posing for the cameras. Cannes really makes the world seem like a small place," she shares.

In the French Riviera for the whole festival, Acharya is looking forward to catching up with more people to learn more about films.

Currently working on her short film, Acharya is 'looking for more collaborators so that the short film has a wider scope'. Post Cannes, she is heading to Monaco to attend the Formula 1 Grand Prix, after which she is returning to India to resume her shoot.

SMART FEATS

Škoda's top three models check all the right boxes, especially with safety and tech features

LEKSHMI C PILLAI

THE safety rating of cars has become a key selling point nowadays. That is why we see a lot of marketing on the star rating of cars. Czech carmaker Škoda, which has tasted success in the Indian market with its second entry strategy India 2.0, aims to make the market aware of the high safety rating of its Kodiaq, Kushaq and Slavia models.

Among the cars manufactured in India, the Slavia sedan and Kushaq SUV are the ones that got a five-star rating in safety (Global NCAP).

At India's Natrax track in Indore, I got a chance to drive all three models.

The Natrax experience

Natrax is Asia's largest vehicle testing centre. The expansive track enables automakers to perform a wide variety of tests such as coast-down, brake, constant speed fuel consumption, speedometer calibration, noise and vibration measurement and mileage accumulation tests, among others.

The event showcased the safety features of Škoda cars and included emergency braking manoeuvres and off-road abilities. I could drive all three models along the high-speed track, handling-test track and off-road track. Each task demonstrated the agility of the machines.

Kushaq and Slavia proved their high-speed stability, ability to run at three-digit speeds for a long duration, manoeuvrability and competent braking. The two models share the same engine-gearbox combo – a 1.5-litre turbo petrol engine, that produces 150 ps of power, mated with a seven-speed dual-clutch automatic transmission. The vehicles never strained to meet our expectations during any of these activities.

Made-in-India Kushaq and Slavia score full five stars for adult and child occupants in the Global NCAP crash tests. Škoda banks on high-strength steel to make the body of these models. They have many features to offer, including scientific design, crumple zones, safety measures like rain-sensing wipers, automatic headlights, tyre-pressure monitoring, multi-collision braking, anti-lock brakes, traction control, electronic stability control, ISOFIX mounts for child seats, top tether anchor points and up to six airbags. And most importantly, pedestrian safety also gets good marks.

The Kodiaq

The seven-seater premium SUV Kodiaq 4x4 is in a different league altogether. It is assembled in India using kits imported from Europe. The vehicle recently scored the highest rating in the Euro NCAP. It comes with a 2-litre turbo petrol engine that produces 190ps power and 320Nm torque. It can accelerate to 100kmph from a standstill in just 7.8 seconds.

XPRESS HIGHWAY
FORTNIGHTLY SEGMENT ON WHAT'S REVVING UP IN THE AUTOMOTIVE SECTOR

I tried my hand on Kodiaq on the 11.6km speed track and an adventurous off-road track. I could feel the utmost confidence in the car's ability and safety even when I touched a speed of 207kmph on the speed track. The vehicle was extremely stable. Though we don't have such an opportunity on our roads, what it proved is the capability to withstand any such extreme conditions.

When we took the Kodiaq to the off-road track, it showed a completely new face. The progressive steering flexes its forces depending on driving conditions and vehicle speed, making it easy to manoeuvre at slow speeds and offering the driver better control at higher speeds.

The Dynamic Chassis Control further adds to the Kodiaq's quiver of features. Apart from allowing the driver to select between eco, comfort, normal, sport, individual and snow modes, DCC also enables the suspension to be raised or lowered by 15mm and hosts an off-road button for enhanced all-terrain abilities when needed.

The car easily went through side inclines, articulation pits, drenches, steep inclines and rocky patches.

Kodiaq is a tech-laden, feature-rich car and comes equipped with nine airbags as standard. The 4x4 includes adaptive front LED headlights, automatic dimming and defogging across all transparent surfaces.

It has electronic, mechanical and hydraulic brake assist, stability control, multi-collision braking and park assist with hands-free parking, among others. In addition, the flagship L&K variant has Tyre Pressure Monitoring System (TPMS) and a 360-degree camera as standard.

The Kodiaq's price range starts at ₹37.99 lakh. Škoda has allocated 3,000 units of Kodiaq for the Indian market this year. If one wants comfortable travel for seven and to enjoy true SUV characteristics at utmost safety, Kodiaq is highly recommended.

'I'M AMAZED BY MY LUCK'

says Rukmini Vasanth, who speaks to us about her first Tamil debut, a big opportunity to work with Vijay Sethupathi, and vows to give her best

A SHARADHAA

RUKMINI Vasanth, who made her silver screen debut with the Kannada film, Birbal, is slowly climbing the ladder of success. With Banaadariyalli, starring Ganesh, and Rakshit Shetty's Sapha Sagaradaache Ello, lined up next, Rukmini is now all set to make her Tamil debut.

Rukmini has been roped in as the lead in Vijay Sethupathi's next, directed by Arumugakumar (Oru Nalla Naal Paathu Solren), and the film was launched in Ipoh, Malaysia. The makers are planning an extensive 40-day schedule in Malaysia. Taking time off her busy schedule, Rukmini shares her excitement about working with Vijay Sethupathi, and stepping into the Tamil film industry.

It is common for actors to star in multiple languages, but it is not always that an actor gets to make her debut opposite a National Award-winning actor like Vijay Sethupathi.

"I am feeling over the moon and it's just a tremendous opportunity to be working with Vijay Sethupathi Sir. I am not trying to put pressure on myself and want to enjoy the process of shooting with such an incredible actor. I am trying not to be awed by everything they do and just stay focused on what I can contribute. I am both excited and nervous," says Rukmini, who tells us that she went through auditions to bag the role. "I also had to get familiar with Tamil, and say a few dialogues as part of my audition, and we just progressed from there," she adds.

But how was it when things finally fell into place? "I know I am capable of a certain kind of performance in Kannada. But I was concerned whether I can provide an equally good performance in Tamil. So when the director was satisfied that I could meet his expectations of the character, it was a major source of encouragement," she says.

On working with Vijay Sethupathi so early in her career, Rukmini says, "I feel extremely lucky. I don't know how well I can express my thoughts. There is gratitude, and I'm amazed by my luck. With these kinds of opportunities, I would like to deliver the best I can," she replies.

Picking a couple of favourites from his stellar filmography, Rukmini says, "It is a tie between 96 and Super Deluxe. Being a bit partial towards romantic films, I really loved the gentle and lyrical 96. But yeah, Super Deluxe is an exceptional film too. I love the idea of the ensemble cast in that film, and each character having such a beautiful arc," she says.

Rukmini Vasanth along with Vijay Sethupathi and team

Rukmini, who has begun shooting, says that she is not sure how much she can reveal about the project but assures that the film will be a fun ride. Does Rukmini consider her entry into Kollywood as a milestone? "As an actor, it is my debut, and in that respect, it is a significant milestone. But regardless of the language I am part of, I'm trying to focus on the story and how much I can contribute with my work," she says.

As for Kannada, Rukmini has Baanadariyalli getting ready for release and has completed shooting for Saptha Sagaradaache Ello directed by Hemanth M Rao. "I still have a few portions left for Bagheera. Thankfully, Sriimurali, the lead hero, who suffered an injury, has recovered. We should be moving on to that project soon," she signs off.

Rishi

RISHI STEPS INTO ACTION ZONE WITH DIRECTOR NANDISH'S FILM

The project is set to commence on June 2, with the production company and cast being unveiled on the same day

Nandish

CE FEATURES

RISHI, known for his roles in Operation Alamelamma and Kavaaludaari, is known for his choice of scripts. While the actor is awaiting the release of Ramana Avatara, he is currently committed to the sets of Prashant Rajappa's next, which also stars Prakash Belawadi. Meanwhile, his next venture will be a big-budget bilingual film in Kannada and Telugu. The film will be helmed by KS Nandish, who previously directed Dear Vikram, featuring Ninasam Sathish. The project is set to commence on June 2, with the production company and cast being unveiled on the same day.

Confirming his collaboration with Nandish, Rishi describes the film as a social drama with a ample of action, which is a significant departure from his usual zone of simple and humorous roles. Reflecting on his film journey, Rishi states, "Comedy has never been my comfort zone. However, I started off with a subject like Operation Alamelamma because I didn't want to limit myself to a specific genre. I wanted to adapt to stories that have the potential to entertain the viewers, regardless of whether they were initially written for me. Through this process, I discovered that I can handle comedy as well. Now, I am getting into my zone, doing something I enjoy. Action allows me to convey force and intensity through my character, and it will be an advantage. The subject aligns with the present times, and more details will be revealed on June 2. We will launch the film soon, however, shooting for the film will begin only after the release of Ramana Avatara." he says.

Rishi stresses the importance of creating content that appeals to the entire audience in theaters. "While Ramana Avatara is geared towards providing mass entertainment, my upcoming film with Nandish will delve into an intense dimension," he says.

In addition to his collaboration with Nandish, Rishi has another project in the pipeline with Mohan Singh. With a promising lineup, Rishi hopes that the same reflects at the box office. "I am confident in my lineup; the only delay was in the execution process. Finally, I will be glad to be out with projects one after another," he says.

Connectivity issues plague Love You Abhi hindering its potential

A SHARADHAA

ORIGINAL web series content in Kannada is scarce as there are only dubbed content in the language. Finally, the Kannada industry gets its own web series (currently streaming on Jio Cinema) featuring Vikram Ravichandran and Aditi Prabhudeva.

The story revolves around young and charismatic industrialist Shiva (Vikram Ravichandran), who becomes enamored with and eventually marries Abhi (played by Aditi Prabhudeva), a widowed woman whose former husband's death remains shrouded in mystery.

As Abhi begins to appreciate Shiva's goodness, the revelation that her first husband's death was not accidental but a murder adds a new twist to the story, and when Police Officer Shiradi Shekhar (Ravi Shankar), comes into the picture, things get more interesting and the stage is set for an exciting showdown between Shiva and Shiradi Shekhar. Is Abhi truly innocent, or does she possess hidden secrets? What compels Shiva's profound love for her? And what lies beneath the circumstances surrounding the murder? These questions serve as the core essence of Love You Abhi.

The initial two episodes of this web series progress at a slow pace, taking time to lay the groundwork. However, the story gains momentum soon after. Love You Abhi by Kali Velayuddham encompasses all the necessary elements of a thriller. But the screenplay suffers from connectivity issues, causing some disjointed moments. The director could have put in more effort to make it visually captivating. Some elements reminiscent of television serials crop up at times. Technically, it could have been more polished. Currently, crime, explicit scenes, and vulgar dialogues dominate much of the content on OTT platforms. Thankfully, Love You Abhi stands out by avoiding such themes, and making it family-friendly. The background music also complements the story effectively.

LOVE YOU ABHI

Director: Kali Velayuddham

Cast: Vikram Ravichandran, Aditi Prabhudeva, and Ravi Shankar

RATING 2/5

Vikram Ravichandran, who is relatively new to the film industry with only one film Trivikrama under his belt, takes on a challenging role in his first web series, Love You Abhi, and has managed to display a decent performance. Similarly, Aditi Prabhudeva too gives her best. Ravi Shankar delivers a notable cameo as a police officer, while Rachita Mahalakshmi's brief role leaves an impression. Srinath, Ambika, Sundar Raj, Vinaya Prasad, and Kempegowda skillfully handle their respective roles.

In conclusion, Love You Abhi is a watchable mystery thriller, which might be flawed, but is a good start to the Kannada web series space.

THE SUSPENSE THRILLER WILL ALSO BE DIRECTOR VARDHAN'S FIRST OUTING

Paaru serial actor Sharath Padmanabh makes silver screen debut

SHARATH Padmanabh is the next in line of actors who have made a successful transition from television serials to films. The actor, known for his popular role in the serial Paaru, now makes his entry in Vardhan MH's suspense thriller.

Vardhan, a filmmaker with a diploma in filmmaking, has previously directed a documentary called Honnu Bithyaro on farmers, which earned him several awards. This upcoming project will be his directorial debut in a feature film.

Providing an update about the film, Vardhan revealed that although the yet-to-be-titled project is primarily a suspense thriller, the first half of the movie has a strong comic undertone. "The film takes place in both the city and crucial portions set inside the forest. We have identified locations in Bengaluru, Sakleshpura, and Madikere," said the director.

The first schedule of filming has been completed, and the team will soon resume shooting for the next set of scenes.

Anoosha Krishna, the lead actor of Mary, Moji, Brahmi, and the yet-to-be-released Hostel Hudugaru Bekagiddare, plays the female lead in this film. The music will be composed by Ronada Bakkesh, while the cinematography will be handled by debutant MK Raj.
